CONDO CORNER

Condominium Owners' Rights and Responsibilities

When you purchase a condominium unit, you automatically become a member of an association of unit owners. With condo ownership comes certain rights and responsibilities.

For example, you have the right to a competent and responsive association that spends prudently, budgets properly, and maintains adequate reserve funding and a board that meets its fiduciary responsibility toward the association.

For instance, you have the responsibility to understand and comply with your association's declaration, bylaws, and house rules and you are also responsible for making sure your guests follow these rules.

To learn more about your rights and responsibilities, check out the Real Estate Branch's short video at <https://youtu.be/Xe5xnr1JvY> and brochure at <https://cca.hawaii.gov/reb/files/2016/05/Owners-Rights-and-Responsibilities-May-2016.pdf>
