"Reservations. I just want to say, I think we need to take this problem much more seriously than we have as a body in the past. As many of you know, feral cats are an invasive species. They devastate native endemic wildlife that is found nowhere else on the planet. The problem is that trap, neuter, release doesn't work. Scientifically it doesn't work. It's been proved again and again and again that it doesn't work. And now we're going to set up a special fund to raise money to do this so that, presumably, some nonprofits can get more money to do something that doesn't work. We need to do something that does work, and this is not it. So, for now I'm reservations. I certainly support the intent, but we need to take this much more seriously."
