
A BILL FOR AN ACT

RELATING TO FORENSIC EXAMINERS.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF HAWAII:

1 SECTION 1. Under section 704-404 of the Hawaii Revised 2 Statutes, a court may order a physical or mental examination of 3 a criminal defendant to determine the defendant's penal 4 responsibility. The legislature finds that the forensic 5 examination process typically takes several months to complete.
6 During this period, a pretrial defendant who may have a serious 7 mental disease or defect will be held in state custody without 8 receiving the appropriate mental health treatment.

9 According to a random sampling of ninety-one pretrial
10 detainees gathered by the Hawaii disability rights center in 11 December 2003, an average of seventy-eight days passed from the 12 date of arrest to the date a forensic examination was requested.
13 An average of eighteen additional days transpired before the 14 court issued an order for evaluation. Thereafter, an average of 15 eighty-four days passed before the examination report was filed
16 and the court determined the defendant's penal responsibility.
17 The entire forensic evaluation process averaged one hundred 18 eighty days from motion to final adjudication. Thirty-five per

1 cent of all pretrial detainees were ultimately found unfit to 2 proceed and were subsequently provided mental health treatment
3 by the State.

4 During past legislative sessions, the legislature
5 considered several measures that were aimed at streamlining the 6 mental evaluation process. The legislature further finds that 7 the compensation paid to forensic examiners is insufficient to 8 encourage psychologists or psychiatrists to perform mental 9 health examinations. The lack of available professionals has 10 contributed substantially to the lengthy forensic evaluation
11 process.

12 Currently, mental health forensic evaluators are paid a 13 flat fee of $500. This fee has not increased since 1992. The 14 legislature further finds that it is neither reasonable nor 15 cost-efficient for a private practice mental health professional 16 to spend a full day traveling to, interviewing, and evaluating a 17 criminal defendant for that sum.

18 The purpose of this bill is to increase the fees paid to 19 examiners performing court-ordered mental health examinations of 20 criminal defendants in order to expedite the forensic evaluation
21 process.
