Senator Trimble rose on a point of personal privilege as follows:

"Mr. President, I rise on a point of personal privilege.

"First of all I'd like to thank you for your op-ed piece in the Advertiser today. I thought it was right on target. I just wanted to note in passing that I spent the last four months in China and even in the worker's paradise of China, their standard deduction in real terms and in dollars is higher than that of the State of Hawaii. So, thank you.

"Let's get back to yesterday's conversation. I don't intend to bring up snowplows again, but if it does come up, we can talk about it. What I'm asking the Chairman of the Higher Education Committee is to consider a different model. I think a different model is appropriate for Hawaii.

"I mentioned that common sense is experience based and that when strangers arrive on our shores and they lack this common sense, they are a hazard to the greater community. But if we look historically at the difference between continents and islands, it may be dangerous to themselves as well, whether it's Magellan at Mactan in the Philippines with Lapulapu; or it's Captain Cook; or how about Paul LaMahieu, who came to our shores after a nationwide search; or Virginia Lowell. So, conducting a search does not produce necessarily a desired result. What I would like the Chairman of the Higher Education Committee to consider is that sometimes it is important to make a decision.

"One of the things that I appreciate about the Senator from the Big Island, the one that normally is to my left, is that she knows when it's appropriate to make a decision because she's had the experience of being a mayor. And sometimes the dialogue should cease and it's time to make a decision. Why should we make the decision now? Well, you know, we have had a temporary president, and as long as the president is temporary, there are a whole lot of other appointments at the University of Hawaii, Manoa, and throughout the system that are also temporary. And so, sooner or later it's time to get off the pot and move forward, and I think that time is now.

"Thank you, Mr. President."

Senator Hee rose on a point of personal privilege and said:

“Mr. President, I rise in response to the previous speaker.

“I would note that but for try, the Land Use Commission might have approved a new dump in Nanakuli, but my colleague to my left showed up and she tried and she succeeded. I would note that when George Helm and Kimo Mitchell disappeared trying to get to Kaho’olawe, they died and they failed, but all others who believed in George and Kimo took up the charge and Kaho’olawe is no longer bombed today.

“So, while conducting a search does not guarantee that the necessary result will be produced, I do know that without trying, we will never know.

“I would suggest that all of us on the Floor ran for office because we tried based on the belief that we could produce a good result for those we choose to serve. That is what conducting a search does – it gives the opportunity for people to try to make a system better.

“Interestingly enough, at 9:45 this morning I had the opportunity to discuss this issue with Michael Fisch, the publisher of the Honolulu Advertiser. And during our discussion, we talked about the lead editorial in today’s paper, which calls for transparency and accountability. We used that lead editorial as a segue to talk about the situation with the hiring of a new president. We both found it mystifying that three months ago he, himself, advocated for a search, and three months ago the editorial writers of the Advertiser advocated for not only a national but an international search, and that on February 22nd the Advertiser flip-flopped and said stability was more important and that McClain was the man. But then in our discussion this morning we agreed that he agreed that his plan is to stay on, president or not, as a faculty member on the board of the School of Business Administration. So, Fisch and I agreed that search or not, stability would always be present because he had no intentions of leaving and he gave no deadline to find a new president.

“So, we find it mystifying that three days ago at the Board of Regents meeting, by unanimous voice vote, the Board of Regents decided to enter into negotiations and in three days from tomorrow the Board of Regents will hire a new president without trying, trying, trying to see if this would not be a great opportunity to import prestige to our school – our only school – by bringing in someone who may be interested from a prestigious institution. Because the relevant question to me is – What is it that the Board of Regents of the University of Hawaii know that the Board of Regents of Harvard, of Yale, of Brown, of Smith, of Dartmouth, of Columbia, of Cornell, of the University of Pennsylvania, of UC Berkeley, of Stanford, of UCLA, of USC, of Illinois, of Indiana, of Michigan, of Northwestern, of Ohio State, of Penn State, of Purdue, of 105 of 123 universities that between January 2005 and July 15, 2005, according to the Chronicle of Higher Education knows? What do the University of Hawaii Regents know that these regents don’t know? That’s the relevant question.

“It’s not about the interim president. It’s about the process. It’s about accountability. It’s about transparency. It’s really about the students, the faculty, and the people of this great State that we call home.

“Thank you, Mr. President.”

Senator Trimble rose in rebuttal and said:

“Mr. President, I rise in brief rebuttal.

“I find it interesting that we talk about transparency. I want to take a moment to talk about transparency. The last time I saw Richard Port was in Rome and I was going to the Forum because I wanted to visit the Senate, and he reminded me that the Senate had always been considered a rather scurrilous lot. And the reason why I bring that up is that a year ago when we were having a confirmation hearing for Dylan Nonaka, there were many faxed letters or actually statements that were identical and they all said the same thing and they were all faxed from the same fax number. And I found that curious. And I asked the Chairman of Higher Education how that could be. Whose fax number was it? We still do not know.

“It is one thing to ask for transparency. It is quite another to stand up and argue, and argue eloquently, but it doesn’t change the facts.

“As long as we’re talking about the facts, let’s go back a week or so when I rose and I said why are we passing a law to change the number of regents? And the answer of the Chair was – number one, it’s the national standard; and number two, if you want accountability, then we should only have one person. Let me take the first issue – the national standard, a very glib easy comment, but if you look at the statistics across the United States for the board of regents, there is no national standard. The Chair did not use ‘best practices’ and there may not be ‘best practices,’ but let’s start and look at numbers of regents: seven, there are three states – Montana, New Mexico, Oklahoma; eight regents, there are four states – Idaho, Michigan, Nebraska, North Dakota; nine regents, there are again four states – Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Texas; ten, there are five states – Arizona, Arkansas, Missouri, South Dakota, and Washington; eleven regents, there are six . . . and by the way, this is the mode – in statistics there are three measures that usually are called upon when you are considering statistics – they are the mean, the mode, and the median. And in fact, when you look at that, there is no standard for the number of regents, neither the mode, nor the median, or the mean. And so, if we’re going to be talking about facts – and I could go through the whole list, but I think I’ve made my point – then let’s talk about facts.

“The Chair of Higher Education talked about if you want accountability, you know, then maybe there should be one person, an interesting model, because when the Board of Regents becomes large, then it divides itself into subgroups and there is one lead. And when you do that, you no longer have a democracy, you have a body that is very similar to this where you have one person, the Chair, he rules. That is not a democracy; it’s an autocracy.

“And if you want to bring the final argument into consideration, one of the things that might discourage people from Harvard or Yale coming to our island state is the practice of Chairs of Committees trying to badger, browbeat, and micromanage the departments they supervise.

“Thank you, Mr. President.”

Senator Hee rose again and said:

“Mr. President, I rise in apology. Evidently, what I thought was humor was taken more serious than I could have imagined.

“When I introduced a bill to propose enlarging the number of regents from 12 to 15, it was done with the advice of the previous Higher Ed Chair and another colleague who evidently is not present. They both indicated that the standards have risen from 12 to 15. I realize that it gives the present Governor three more selections, but that really is inconsequential to the bill insofar as raising the prominence of the University of Hawaii to a national standard.

“When the previous speaker, interestingly enough, spoke against the bill, I thought I would inject humor and say, well, if he wants to reduce it let’s take it down to one. I owe you an apology. Evidently my humor was not received as it should be.

“I don’t know about the fax machine on Dylan Nonaka or the relevance it has to do with the process on the issue today, but I owe no apologies with that because I have no idea what he’s talking about.

“Lastly, Mr. President, I would like to wish all the women happy Girl’s Day. Thank you.”
