RE: Support for HCR37

Please support HCR37 that requests religious and faith-based organizations to serve as Safe Havens for victims of domestic violence.

For a moment, please think about what circumstances would drive you yourself to seek shelter and protection from a religious entity. It'd probably be under pretty dire circumstances, right? If you were a victim of domestic violence, where would you turn for sanctuary? Suppose your home is a living hell and the most likely place that you'd be harmed? Suppose going to a friend or family member's home would endanger the ones you love? Suppose the shelter is at capacity and has absolutely no room to accommodate you and your children? Suppose you don't have a penny to your name to provide food for you and your children, let alone money to find a place to run and hide to escape someone's wrath?

May-be not so surprisingly, when batterer intervention groups were conducted in church or religious-based facilities, participants reported feeling more contrite about what they had done as compared to batterer intervention groups that were conducted in non-religious settings. Religious and faith-based organizations would provide another level of deterrence to an abuser intent on "getting" his victim. Please bear in mind that this would be at the institution's consent - that this would not be a mandatory imposition to all religious and faith-based organizations. When it comes to escaping a domestic violence situation, more avenues for sanctuary are desperately needed because when the time comes, you'd be surprised at how many doors will close in your face.

Thank you for your time and consideration.
