2 plantations used to stand as one of the main pillars of Hawaii's 3 economy; and

4
5 WHEREAS, diversified agriculture, which provides products
6 like coffee, macadamia nuts, and tropical flowers, can continue 7 to contribute significantly to the state's economy; and

8
9 WHEREAS, there is growing awareness by government leaders, 10 the business community, and residents in general about the 11 benefits of supporting local agriculture, including fresher
12 food, the increased re-circulation of profits within the local 13 economy, food security, and greater environmental 14 sustainability; and

15
16 WHEREAS, the popularity of consuming locally grown and 17 produced food has risen markedly in recent years, as evidenced 18 by the growth of farmers' markets and other settings in which 19 consumers can purchase food directly from producers; and

20

22 producers depends on the availability of continuous 23 transportation links, which could be disrupted by a variety of 24 external factors beyond the state's control, such as natural
25 disasters, a calamitous spike in oil prices, or work stoppages
26 at West Coast ports; and

27

29 help reduce Hawaii's vulnerability to such externalities; and

1 WHEREAS, the primary role of the State's Land Use
2 Commission is to ensure that areas of state concern are 3 addressed and considered in the land use decision-making 4 process; and

15 (3) Acts on requests for special use permits within the 16 agricultural and rural districts;

17
18 and

19
20 WHEREAS, residential developments are often constructed on 21 lands that could be used for agricultural purposes; and

24 least, mitigating their loss--should be a priority for the 25 State; now, therefore,
