Bill No. and Title: Bill No. 1921, Relating to Temporary Restraining Orders

Purpose: Provides for the issuance of temporary restraining orders ("TROs") by the Family and District Courts upon submission of sufficient oral sworn testimony communicated to the court by telephone, radio, or other means of electronic voice communication, if exigent circumstances exist sufficient to excuse the failure of the applicant to appear personally.

Judiciary's Position:

The Judiciary opposes this bill and raises the following concerns.

(1) In addition to "law enforcement officer", this bill allows the Supreme Court, through its rule making authority, to designate other "persons" to assist applicants requesting temporary restraining orders. Our concern is that the process will involve time-sensitive responses to applicants as well as the responsibility "to enter the court's authorization verbatim on the appropriate form, designated the duplicate original temporary restraining order." It may be clearer to restrict the designation to "law enforcement" and delete references to other "persons."

(2) Limiting this bill to law enforcement officers is particularly important since this bill allows an officer to create a valid court order since the person assisting the petitioner creates a form that is "designated as the duplicate original temporary restraining order." This is an unusual scheme. Currently, the police have the authority in domestic abuse cases, using their own powers, to issue "stay away orders" sufficient to give the petitioner enough time to obtain a temporary restraining order through the usual court procedures. This bill allows the police

(generally recognized as part of the Executive branch of government) to, in effect, be “deputized” as a member of the Judicial branch of government in both civil and domestic TRO cases and empowered to create an original court order (a responsibility generally kept strictly to judges and their staff in order to preserve the public’s confidence in court orders and to prevent fraud).

(3) These TROs are required to be served before they become enforceable. Thus, although they are “effective” when the court grants it, they are not “enforceable” until the respondent has been served with the court order. This means that, if a respondent contacts or abuses the petitioner after the order has been granted but before the order has been served, the respondent cannot be prosecuted for violating the court order (although the respondent could be arrested in the event a crime were committed). The Supreme Court may be unable to change this requirement of service through their rulemaking authority. In contrast, a respondent can be prosecuted for disobeying a valid police issued stay-away order.

(4) Additionally, without an explicit authorization from the Legislature, the Supreme Court would not have the authority to direct police procedures through their rulemaking authority.

(5) At this time, such orders are not served between the hours of 10pm to 6am, unless a judge specifically allows this in writing on the summons. If this bill’s intent is that process will be available 24 hours a day, then the bill should explicitly allow service 24 hours a day in order to keep this proposed process as streamlined as possible.

(6) We are unsure of the scope of this bill. Are these procedures applicable during regular court hours? Does this bill require this process to be available 24 hours a day?

(7) If this bill requires 24 hour coverage, the Judiciary will need additional appropriations, beyond our current budget requests, in order to provide these services. On the neighbor islands, it is anticipated that staff and judges will have to be available after-hours on an on-call basis. On Oahu, because of the size of its population, we anticipate the need to develop new after-hours staff dedicated for this purpose as well as assigning this as a “calendar” for a judge rather than leaving it on an on-call basis. We have not developed a cost plan primarily because of the ambiguities in this bill. However, as an example, pursuant to collective bargaining, the minimum cost for one Social Worker IV position (the person who would have the responsibility for fielding the contacts from law enforcement) to be on call would be approximately $32,948.23 annually. This includes compensation for standby duty, mileage, night differential, and meal costs.

(8) Additionally, new equipment and software may be needed to develop this new system of processing TROs (for example, a new interface between law enforcement and the courts may be needed).

(9) Additionally, a training process will have to developed for both Judiciary and law enforcement personnel. In our experience, we have found that, when Petitioners in family court cases are assisted by untrained persons, there may be a greater dissatisfaction with the court process (for example, when a Petitioner claims that a non-family court related person did not accurately express the Petitioner's claims and statements—this in turn gives the Respondent less than adequate notice about the claims he/she will be required to address in court).

(10) There cannot be unfettered contact between the petitioner and the judge for very practical reasons. There are and will be procedural requirements that both the Petitioner and the law enforcement officer will need help with. Based on our experience, we have also found that Petitioners need help focusing their statements. While court officers are extremely careful not to place statements in the mouths of Petitioners and are extremely careful not to act as advocates, they provide necessary help in explaining what is and is not relevant or what may or may not be significant. For example, a Petitioner might present a rather minor annoyance with the Respondent as the basis for a TRO and then happen to mention as an aside an actual physical abuse event which they did not consider to be important because of the frequency of such occurrences. Court staff will also have to create files and complete paperwork after the judge has completed his/her part of the process.

(11) Besides the practical, there is another extremely important reason to avoid direct personal contact with the judge. Such a procedure is inherently unfair to Respondents and will be rightfully perceived as such. When court staff assists in the preparation of the petition or complaint, the judge is not exposed to all of the extraneous statements and information imparted by the Petitioner. The judge and the Respondent will read the same statements. The Respondent is assured that there were no ex parte communications between the Petitioner and the judge and that, at the initial hearing, both parties will be appearing before a judge at the same time.

All of the above listed factors relate to judicial processes. However, we also have a few policy comments to raise for the Legislature's consideration.

(A) Many district court cases are less volatile than family court cases since intimate relationships are not usually involved. Also, unlike family court cases, district court orders are generally less intrusive (for example, family court respondents can be ordered to vacate their home immediately and to have no further contact with their children until at least the first return hearing). If this bill intends 24 hour coverage, its implementation may be potentially very costly and so need for such coverage in district court cases may have to be re-examined.

(B) Allowing a more relaxed and remote process may possibly allow for more false claims based on improper motives.

(C) Besides the possibility of an increase in false claims, there may be an overall increase in petitions filed in both family and district courts. Of course, all valid petitions and complaints should be dealt with expeditiously and properly. However, if, for whatever reason, there is an overall increase in these petitions and complaints, the Judiciary will require increased judicial resources or delays may result.

The Judiciary takes issue with that part of the report by the Senate Committee on Judiciary and Labor (SB 1054, SD 1, SSCR #505, dated March 3, 2011) that comments on the perceived failure by the Supreme Court:

“ . . . the Judiciary has not adequately used its power under article VI, section 7, of the Hawaii State Constitution, which vests the Supreme Court with the power to promulgate rules and regulations in all civil and criminal cases for all courts relating to process, practice, procedure, and appeals, which shall have the force and effect of law.”

As discussed above, these matters are not simple and the solutions are not clearly indicated. Furthermore, the Supreme Court does not have the legislative authority to simply promulgate rules that would have the effect of law over all persons and all agencies. Lastly, as discussed above, the Judiciary and the family and district courts have done quite a bit to streamline processes and to make forms and processes more “user friendly” over the years. And, we intend to continue to work toward greater improvements.

If this bill should pass, we respectfully request that the effective date be at least two years from the date of promulgation, i.e., sometime beyond the summer of 2013, in order to allow the Judiciary and all law enforcement agencies to first develop the procedures for all the different circuits, then enough time to seek adequate appropriations from the Legislature, and then enough time to train and implement the new program.

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on this matter.

Testimony in Opposition to HB 1921

To: Chair John M. Mizuno

Re: Testimony in Opposition to HB 1921, Relating to Temporary Restraining Orders

On behalf of the Hawaii State Commission on the Status of Women, I would like to thank the committee for this opportunity to provide testimony on this important issue. I would like to express my opposition to this bill, which would allow petitioners for temporary restraining orders to provide oral sworn testimony or a complaint to a judge by electronic means.

While this legislation may be well intentioned in that it seeks to allow victims of domestic violence to bypass some steps in the path toward safety, I do not believe that greater safety for victims will be the actual result. The restraining order process is sometimes the only means toward safety for a victim and her children. Increasingly, batterers have learned how to manipulate the TRO process in order to further abuse their partners and children and once again, to reassert control over them. Often times, batterers race to the courthouse in order to claim that they are the true victims, and their partners, the actual batterers.¹

By allowing petitioners to provide oral sworn testimony to law enforcement officers or by providing a complaint to a judge by electronic means, this legislation would allow further manipulation of the protective order system, making it difficult for the courts to discern and assess the true levels of violence and danger. Further, the bill does not provide for the law enforcement officer, or "other person designated by rule to assist the applicant" to be well trained in the dynamics of domestic violence or in assessing credibility of the petitioner. This further muddies the process and enables batterers to potentially manipulate the system in order to gain control over their victims. It also makes it difficult for victims, including immigrants and non-English speakers, who may be reluctant to seek assistance from law enforcement.

Finally, when victims come to court to apply for a restraining order, they are given the opportunity to receive crisis support, safety planning, relevant referrals and information about service of process. These services are essential to victims' safety and without these services in place, victims may be placed in greater danger. I respectfully request that this Committee not pass HB 1921.

Thank you for this opportunity,

Catherine Betts, Esq.

Dear Chair Mizuno and Members:

Subject: House Bill No. 1921, Relating to Temporary Restraining Orders

I am Britt Nishijo, Captain of the Criminal Investigation Division of the Honolulu Police Department, City and County of Honolulu.

The Honolulu Police Department opposes House Bill No. 1921, Relating to Temporary Restraining Orders.

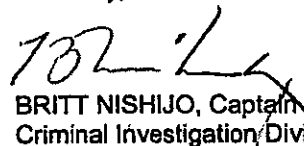

Honolulu police officers who respond to domestic violence incidents and have reasonable grounds to believe that there was recent physical abuse or harm inflicted by the suspect upon the victim are directed to issue a warning citation to the suspect.

The warning citation orders the suspect to leave the premises and not initiate contact by phone or in person for 24 hours. When the incident occurs after 12 p.m. on Friday, the 24-hour period is extended until 4:30 p.m. on the next work day. Failure to abide by the order subjects the suspect to arrest under section 709-906 of the Hawaii Revised Statutes. This allows the victim time to obtain a temporary restraining order from the Family Court.

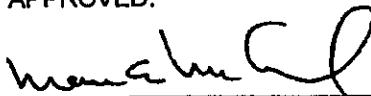

The Honolulu Police Department urges you to oppose House Bill No. 1921, Relating to Temporary Restraining Orders.

Thank you for the opportunity to testify.

Sincerely,

BRITT NISHIJO, Captain
Criminal Investigation Division

RE: Strong Support for HB1921, Relating to Temporary Restraining Orders

Good Morning Representatives and thank you for this opportunity to provide testimony on this measure.

On behalf of domestic violence survivors - particularly those from remote places on the outer islands - I would like to express our strong support of this proposal.

When domestic violence victims have to apply for a TRO, it's a VERY nerve-wracking and frightening process; they are fully aware that obtaining a TRO is going to REALLY upset their abuser and may just be the final straw where he'll decide to make good on the threat of "If you leave me, I'll kill you".

Making the commitment and following through on a decision to get a TRO is often fraught with a lot of "false starts" as the victim weighs the pros and cons of doing so. The more steps and inconveniences presented become more reasons to "just forget it".

Going through the Judiciary's process on Oahu is a long and tedious one but most notably, if you're assaulted on a Thursday night, you won't be able to obtain a TRO earlier than Monday morning so while the police can tell your abuser to stay away for 48 hours to cool off, that offers little reassurance for victims when Saturday night rolls around.

Submission of oral sworn testimony or complaint to a judge by electronic means will make the process easier AND be more time and cost-efficient for all involved.

Respectfully,

Dara Carlin, M.A.
