COMMITTEE ON OCEAN, MARINE RESOURCES AND HAWAIIAN AFFAIRS

HCR 14 URGING THE UNITED STATES TO RECOGNIZE THE RECOVERY OF THE HAWAIIAN GREEN SEA TURTLES AND BEGIN ACTIVE MANAGEMENT OF THIS IMPORTANT SPECIES

Wednesday, February 13, 2013; 10:50am; Room 325

Aloha Madam Chair Hanohano and members of the committee hearing on HCR14 with regard to the Hawaiian Green Sea Turtle. I am Soulee Stroud president of the Association of Hawaiian Civic Clubs (AHCC) speaking in support of this resolution asking the United States to pay attention to the recovery of the Hawaiian Green Sea Turtle and to do something about its management at the Federal level.

In the AHCC convention at Turtle Bay, Oahu in 2011, resolution 11-51 was debated and adopted by the delegates assembled. This resolution called for the State of Hawaii to adopt a management plan very similar to what is intended in HCR 14 before you today.

On August 1, 2012 the AHCC received the 90-day finding on a petition filed by AHCC on February 14, 2012 with the Secretaries of Commerce and the Interior to classify the Hawaiian green sea turtle, or honu, as a discrete population segment (DPS) and then remove it from the Endangered Species Act (ESA) list.

The National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) stated that the petition presents substantial scientific and commercial information indicating that the petitioned action may be warranted, and will initiate a status review of green turtles globally. According to the timeline set forth under the ESA, NMFS is expected to complete the status review within 12 months of the petition, which will be February 2013. When the review is complete, NMFS will make a determination of whether the Hawaiian population of green turtles qualifies for a DPS and whether a delisting is warranted.

The AOHCC petition reviews the biology, ecology, natural history and status of the Hawaiian green turtle population. Results from over 38 years of intensive research indicate that this stock satisfies criteria to be designated a DPS. The petition addresses the factors for delisting a species and describes the best available science and most current information to show that the Hawaiian population, once designated as a DPS, should be delisted under the ESA. The petition can be downloaded at www.aohcc.org.

The green sea turtle has been on the ESA list since 1978. The species has been considered threatened throughout its range, except for Florida and the Pacific coast of Mexico, where breeding populations are listed as endangered. A DPS is the smallest division of a species that may be independently listed or delisted under the ESA, and must fulfill criteria of discreteness and significance with respect to the rest of the species.

A recent assessment under the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) Red List found that the Hawaii green turtle population has successfully rebounded and is now a species of “Least Concern.” The assessment was reviewed by the IUCN’s Marine Turtle Specialist Group, which includes over 200 sea turtle experts worldwide.

It is our belief that this status review will support that the Hawaiian green sea turtle qualifies for a DPS, and that the DPS has successfully recovered to the point that it no longer requires ESA protection. This would allow the people of Hawaii to manage this important cultural resource.

We support this resolution and mahalo for the opportunity to testify.

SUPPORT FOR Bill HCR14 - RELATING TO Hawaiian Green Sea Turtle; Active Management; Endangered Species

Aloha Chairs and Members of the Committee,

I am in strong opposition to Bill H.C.R.14, Relating to Hawaiian Green Sea Turtle; Active Management; Endangered Species

Delisting the Hawaiian Green Sea Turtle would cause a chain reaction of harmful impacts. As a rule I support Hawaiian Cultural Practices, but in this case beginning the harvest the honu again would cause more harm, than do good.

The turtle population recovery could easily be set back into a listing, if harvests were once again allowed. Statistics tells us that only one per one thousand hawaiian green sea turtle eggs become full grown adults. These turtles do not even reach sexual maturity until the average age of thirty. Once pregnant they must swim five hundred mile to the French Frigate Shoals atoll, where they lay their eggs on the shoreline. Procreation rates are slow.

The sea turtles would be like sitting ducks if harvested again. Thousands of Maui visitors per day are taken to locations, with names like, "Turtle Arches" and "Turtle Town" where snorkelers and divers anticipate an underwater view of the honu. The turtles have become almost tame, as they have learned that humans are not a threat. What would happen if Hawaiian cultural practitioners (or self appointed Hawaiian practitioners) entered the area to hunt? How would the law enforce distinguish true practitioners from those who are self appointed? How would the general behavior of the turtles towards people change?

Lastly, climate change, sea-level rising, ocean acidification, and marine debris along with other human induced pollutants will continue to threaten the Hawaiian Green Sea Turtle population more and more in the future. As far as harming the ecosystem, I just do not see it, on the contrary I see our Maui County turtles helping mitigate our overabundance of algae in the near shore waters and help to keep algae blooms in check.

Please consider the harms versus the gains when making the final decision. It is a very slippery slope trying to artificially balance the ecosystem.

Comments: The GEEN SEA TURTLES of the Hawaiian Islands are one of the most important species for a balanced ecology in our coastal waters. GREEN SEA TURTLES are also one of the reasons thousands of Tourist come to Hawaii to see. When the Whale season is over and the Dolphins are not seen, the GREEN SEA TURTLES are what tourists from everywhere talk about to their friends around the world. Save our ecology, PROTECT OUR GREEN SEA TURTLES. Mahalo

Comments: I spend a lot of time in the water. I am also a boat owner. Currently, I live on Maui; we frequently take our boat to Lanai and Molokai. I have also lived on Oahu and The Big Island. In addition, I have a bachelors degree in Marine Biology from HPU. Green Sea turtles do not seem to need help in terms of increasing their numbers. However, active measures need to be taken to prevent rumors from growing and spreading (including public education).

The consequences of the proposed de-listing of the Hawaiian green sea turtle (Chelonia mydas), known as "honu", encompass multi-faceted cultural, scientific, emotional, and sociological levels and should be approached with an open mind and respect for everyone involved. My perspective comes from researching and protecting sea turtles since 1996 (in Hawai'i since 2000), and conducting my Master's thesis on Kaho'olawe's sea turtle population. Everyone views turtles differently, so how do we reach a balance? The goal of all management actions should be to perpetuate the species so they can continue to fulfill their important ecological role and for future generations to experience.

This subject has been brewing for generations, and we do need to acknowledge and appreciate the restraint that turtle hunters of old had when turtles became protected by law in the late 1970s. Yes, poaching definitely still occurs today, although to what extent and significant impacts to the population are unknown. Generations of "locals" have grown up to appreciate Hawai'i's sea turtles not for their meat, but for other qualities and don't look at them as food sources as was the case in the past. Reinvigorating this turtle hunting mentality after making such solid conservation strides is going to set us back many years and have further reaching effects than we can foresee now.

Sending the message that "it's okay" to hunt turtles breeds cruelty in our keiki and adults, because killing a turtle is not a kind practice. It's truly traumatizing to watch. And what is this going to do to tourism? Announcing that turtles can be hunted again will cast a dark shadow over Hawai'i. A turtle slaughter would be a horrible thing for most families to witness, especially if they've experienced the beauty of watching them underwater. Economic models indicate that turtles are worth more alive than dead, as turtles are terrific for tourism.

It is becoming more and more common to see green turtles basking (crawling onshore to rest) on Hawaiian shorelines, a unique behavior that only happens in Hawai'i and Australia. This offers amazing opportunities for people to respectfully witness turtles, as these turtles feel safe enough despite not having any natural defenses on land. Turtle nesting is also happening again in the Main Hawaiian Islands. Both of these activities naturally occurred in the past, but it is theorized that hunting decimated that population, so the only safe place for them to bask and nest became the Northwestern Hawaiian Islands. Snorkelers and divers appreciate them because they can swim alongside them, and the mutual eye contact often triggers an emotional connection unlike swimming with fish. The turtles' reactions to humans will completely change if turtles fear humans again. This kind of close proximity doesn't happen throughout the rest of the world, so Hawai'i is a very special place in this regard. It might not change overnight, but that behavioral shift from peacefulness to distress will occur and the specialness of the Hawaiian honu experience will lessen to a noticeable degree.

Not surprisingly, there is already a lot of confusion and mis-education about the de-listing process and what it will entail. It will not be easy to reach all facets of society and promote collaboration as this progresses and into the future. We fear that this whole process will trigger injudicious negative feelings that turtles will suffer from. Turtles shouldn't be killed out of anger and misunderstanding, or out of spite for the government/Western ways. Turtles cannot be blamed, along with the vilified Hawaiian monk seals, for the lack of fish in the ocean for people to eat because neither of these species makes a larger impact than humans. The ocean is their world that they must fully sustain themselves on, not for humans to greedily take from without giving back to. Turtles are key components in the Hawaiian nearshore reef ecosystem, and I seriously question that they are doing any damage as stated in H.C.R. No. 14: "WHEREAS, today, scientific studies as well as reports by Native Hawaiian lawai'a (cultural practitioners of fishing) have concluded that the honu population is approaching full recovery and that the environment and ecosystem are suffering from the current over-protection and over-population of honu." The fact is that the environment and ecosystem would greatly suffer without them.

We respect Hawaiian cultural ideals that perpetuate traditional practices when done in a purely cultural manner for subsistence purposes. If deemed "recovered", then we would recognize the desire for the host culture to want to renew this practice. No commercial activity should be allowed, as those pressures significantly contributed to the decline of the population.

Historically, sea turtles were carefully managed, but how is this type of take going to be managed and enforced in modern day society? Where is the funding going to come from? There are multiple factors to consider in constructing a realistic management framework given the system's current constraints. The de-listing determination and subsequent technical parameters should be based on solid science and cultural needs with the goal of not affecting the population. Who will be permitted? How many turtles? What size? What sex? What health condition? What locations? What season? What capture methods? What kill methods? How will the body parts be utilized? Will carapaces and bones now be legal to possess? How can the selling of these parts be prohibited, to not promote commercial activity? These are all important factors to consider when visualizing the entire take process, and regulating it is a very daunting (seemingly impossible) task.

Recognizing the limitations of our current enforcement capabilities, the sustainable management will need to come from within the community, with a solid checks-and-balances system review process. Otherwise, it will likely become a free-for-all very quickly once that door is opened, and closing the door again will not be easy. Achieving the goal of sustainable resource management is going to take a lot of hard work on multiple levels considering the complexities, but it is an objective that will hopefully have further reaching effects into all local nearshore resources management. Bringing everyone to the table is the first step, which needs to happen immediately.

Hawaiian hawksbills (Eretmochelys imbricata) are rare and not recovering like the greens appear to be. Due to their rarity, it is not widely known that hawksbills even exist in Hawaiian nearshore waters. And with fewer than 100 known nesting females in all of Hawai'i, with ~5-15 known to nest annually (compared with over 500 greens that typically nest annually), the population can't afford to lose any individuals. So our biggest concern with green turtle harvesting focuses on protecting the critically endangered Hawaiian hawksbills. They cannot be taken! Hawksbills will be directly impacted by a green turtle harvest whether being caught accidentally (since they can be confused with greens) or deliberately (since a hawkbill shell has its own sought after value).

Hawksbills have their own island-specific Hawaiian name, "honu'ea" or "ea", and were traditionally used in different ways than the greens. They are already listed as critically endangered, and this additional pressure will be their population downfall if this honu harvest is allowed. Hawksbills rest and forage in the same nearshore ecosystems as the greens and have also become quite tame. Luckily they don't bask like the greens, who are definitely "sitting ducks". This evolution of behavior is evidence of not necessarily recovery, but a natural comfort around people which will lessen if hunting is allowed. Another factor to consider: hawksbills in some Caribbean regions are known to be poisonous to humans if consumed, which may be the case here in Hawai'i as well.

Hawai'i is the endangered species capital of the world, and the recovery of the green sea turtle is probably the best success story and should be celebrated, but with caution considering all of the current survival threats: loss of nesting habitats, degradation of nearshore reef ecosystems, fishing gear interactions, boat strikes, fibropapillomatosis and other diseases, harassment, entanglement and ingestion of marine debris, and climate change. Will adding hunting to this long list bring them back towards extinction?

Mahalo for your attention to this serious matter. Please contact me with any questions or clarifications.

Comments: Please do not pass this bill. The Hawaiian people are lucky to have such beautiful and diverse wildlife, especially your fantastic sea turtles. My family was fortunate to visit Maui and dive with your majestic green sea turtles. We have great respect for the Hawaiian people and all they have done to protect Earth's precious resources--now is not the time to change. While great progress has been made to protect Hawaii's green sea turtles, they still need your help. They are only just recovering from poaching and habitat degradation, and now as I understand from the Maui Ocean Center they are facing a new problem, a tumor-causing virus called fibropapilloma, which ultimately leads to death. To survive this latest threat green sea turtles need all the help and protection they can get from the Hawaiian people. I urge you not to pass this bill. I would be so sad if Maui lost its beautiful sea turtles, they are one of my fondest memories of your beautiful state.

Comments: There are not enough documented laying female honu to warrant delisting. I snorkel almost daily and see so many honu with the FP tumors, fish hooks and fishing line entanglement and have found the plastrons of 3 honu which shows the killing is already happening. I just returned from a trip in the caribbean where they are already seeing turtle nests being washed out to sea because of rising sea levels and different storm patterns. House Concurrent Resolution 14 urges the United States to declare that the Hawaiian green sea turtle is a distinct population segment (DPS) and that this DPS has recovered, and, therefore, the United States should remove the Hawaiian green sea turtle within the DPS from the list of threatened and endangered species. The Department of Land and Natural Resources (“Department”) opposes the Resolution as premature at this time and offers the following comments.

All marine turtle species that occur in Hawaii waters are currently listed as threatened or endangered under the federal and state Endangered Species Acts. All are protected under law. A petition has been filed with the United States Departments of Commerce and Interior to classify the Hawaiian green sea turtle as a DPS and then remove it from the Endangered Species Act (ESA) list.

These federal agencies will initially determine whether the petition is substantive and proceed in accordance with federal Endangered Species Act regulations, which include a full scientific review. Existing studies both support and are precautionary as to the recovery status of the green sea turtle stock. The Department expects to work with the federal government in their ESA process in order to fully evaluate this proposal. Until that work is done, it would be premature to adopt a resolution prejudging the issue.

RE: Testimony in Opposition to HCR 14; Urging The United States To Recognize The Recovery Of Hawaiian Green Sea Turtles And Begin Active Management Of This Important Species.

On behalf of the Center for Biological Diversity and our 450,000 members and online activists dedicated to the protection of endangered species and wild places, I am writing to ask the committee not to pass HR 14. Approximately 300 of our supporters in Hawaii, and thousands more, have already taken the time and effort to submit comments to the federal government to support continued protections for the Hawaiian green sea turtles under the federal Endangered Species Act. HR 14 threatens to undermine important conservation measures that have helped Hawaii's green sea turtles.

The best available science does not warrant delisting of the Hawaiian population of green sea turtles. While population increases demonstrate the success of Endangered Species Act protections, it is premature to delist these sea turtles, which were on the brink of extinction not long ago. The National Marine Fisheries Service has set as a recovery goal for green sea turtle stocks at an average of 5,000 breeding females per year over six consecutive years. The Fish and Wildlife Service reported that an average of 390 females nested annually in the Hawaiian Archipelago from 2000 to 2009. Accordingly, the Hawaiian green sea turtle has not meet delisting criteria required to establish its full recovery, and the sea turtles face significant ongoing threats to their continued survival.

HR 14 ignores the best available scientific information, and it seeks to remove the precise conservation measures under the federal Endangered Species Act that have been crucial for the steps toward recovery that green sea turtles in Hawaii are experiencing. Green sea turtles face key threats in Hawaii including (1) habitat loss and degradation due to climate change, including sea-level rise, rising temperatures, and ocean acidification, (2) fibropapillomatosis, (3) plastic ingestion and entanglement, (4) mortality in fisheries, and (5) inadequate regulatory mechanisms. This resolution does nothing to address these continuing threats. Moreover, removing federal management and turning it entirely over to the State would significantly burden the Department of Land and Natural Resources, which has already acknowledged difficulties arising from lack of enforcement, lack of personnel, and lack of funding.

This resolution would send a dangerous message, by attempting political interference in a scientific determination about the recovery of Hawaii's green sea turtles and exploiting a vulnerable species that part of Hawaii's natural heritage. It would jeopardize the progress that has already been made in the recovery of the sea turtle. It also completely disregards the interests and livelihood of all of those who benefit, visitors and residents alike, from enjoying Hawaii's natural beauty and wildlife, including green sea turtles.

I appreciate your consideration of this testimony and again ask you to reject HCR 14.

Sincerely,

/s/ Miyoko Sakashita

On behalf of our members and supporters across Hawaii, we ask the Committee not to pass HCR 14.

As you know, all species of sea turtle found in U.S. waters, including Hawaii, are listed as either endangered or threatened under the Endangered Species Act. Federal law permits states to implement measures that afford greater protection to a listed species but must at a minimum comply with and not undermine federal mandates for protection.

There is an important distinction between evidence that a species is recovering versus that it has recovered. NMFS has set as a recovery goal for the sea turtle an average of 5,000 breeding females per year over six consecutive years. An August 2007 status review shows the nesting population at French Frigate Shoals at 400 over a 5 year period. The review indicates that the population is increasing, but it is nowhere near meeting the criteria for demonstrating that the population is recovered and can be considered for delisting at the Federal level.

The resolution claims that the sea turtle is currently over-populated however there is no scientific evidence to support the idea that the population is recovered, much less over-populated. In order to delist a species, it is also necessary to determine that threats facing the species have been adequately addressed so that populations can be secured in perpetuity. The sea turtle faces continued and possibly increasing threats that include by-catch by commercial fisheries, development near nesting beaches, marine debris, ship traffic and ship strikes, and the effects of climate change on sex ratios and habitat. In fact, just last September, in partnership with DLNR, we offered a reward in the wake of multiple reports of illegal poaching of sea turtles on Maui in spite of their protected status. This indicates a lack of compliance with current management measures and does not give us much confidence that future management measures would be followed if a delisting was to occur.

In closing, this resolution would send a dangerous message, allowing fisheries and other parties with a commercial interest in exploiting a vulnerable species to dictate the fate of that species—in this case, sea turtles are a treasured natural resource that is valued by all. It would jeopardize the progress that has already been made in the recovery of the sea turtle. It also completely disregards the interests and livelihood of all of those who benefit from the many tourists who visit our islands to enjoy our natural beauty and unique wildlife, which includes sea turtles.

We appreciate your consideration of our testimony and again ask you to reject HCR 14.

Re: Vote No on HCR 14 Urging the United States to Recognize the Recovery of Hawaiian Green Sea Turtles and Begin Active Management of This Important Species

Hearing: Wednesday, February 13, 2013, 10:50 am, Room 325

Dear Chair Hanohano and Committee Members,

Turtle Island Restoration Network (SeaTurtles.org) is writing on behalf of its more than 60,000 members and supporters in Hawaii, California and across America to urge you to vote "No" on HCR 14, urging the U.S. government to recognize the recovery of the Hawaiian green sea turtle or "honu" and begin active management of this species and to delist it from the threatened species list under the U.S. Endangered Species Act.

SeaTurtles.org opposes this resolution for the following reasons:

1. It is premature for the Hawaii House of Representatives to pass a resolution in advance of a federal determination and regulatory process now under way on the status of the Hawaiian green sea turtle.
2. The Hawaiian green sea turtle has not met recovery goals under the U.S. Endangered Species Act.
3. Threats to the survival and recovery of Hawaiian green sea turtles from human activities are increasing, not decreasing.
4. As a result of the facts above, statements in the resolution are inaccurate.

Please also consider the following:

- In 2012, more than 120,000 people wrote letters or signed petitions opposing the delisting of the honu and the possible hunting of this sea turtle in the Hawaiian Islands.
- Dozens of conservation organizations along with numerous tourism businesses based in Hawaii also signed a letter opposing the delisting of the honu.
- Our organization along with several partners submitted extensive comments raising concerns about the possible delisting of the honu.
- The conservation community opposed similar resolutions HR 87, HR 61 that were presented but voted down by the House of Representatives in 2012.
- We are submitting these letters in regards to HCR14 as they are directly relevant to the language and intent of the resolution.

Turtle Island Restoration Network (SeaTurtles.org) is a nonprofit environmental organization based in California. Turtle Island carries out four initiatives: the Sea Turtle Restoration Project, Shark Stewards, the Salmon Protection and Watershed Network and the Got Mercury Campaign. We work to protect endangered marine species, save critical ecosystems, improve consumer choices, encourage government action and inspire corporate responsibility, all to protect marine wildlife and the wild oceans we all rely upon.

1. The Hawaiian green sea turtle has not met recovery goals set under the U.S. Endangered Species Act

The Hawaiian green sea turtle has been listed as threatened under the U.S. Endangered Species Act (ESA) since 1978. The most recent status review for the green sea turtle was published by the U.S. government in August 2007 (NMFS 2007). The recovery goal for the Hawaiian green sea turtle is an average of 5,000 breeding females per year over six consecutive years. (NMFS 2007). As a result of protections under the ESA, the Hawaiian green sea turtle population has increased from near-extinction when as few as 83 females nested each year in the 1970s. Nevertheless, the average number of breeding females per year between 2002 and 2009 totals 400 breeding females.

The highest number of breeding female green sea turtles recorded since the 1970s numbered 843 in 2011. (NMFS 2012). Even at this level, the number of breeding females falls far short of the 5,000 breeding females required under the ESA to be considered for delisting. While a several criterion are considered when listing or delisting a species under the ESA, the recovery plan for Pacific green sea turtles is clear that all criteria including number of breeders must be met before any change in status can be considered. (NMFS 2007).

2. Threats to the survival and recovery of the Hawaiian green sea turtle from human activities are increasing, not decreasing

The threats to the survival and recovery of Hawaiian green sea turtles are expected to increase, not decrease, in the future. Threats to the population include loss of habitat due to coastal development and submersion due to rising sea levels, feminization of populations due to warmer beach temperatures due to global warming, excess bycatch in commercial fisheries due to expanding fisheries, exposure to heavy metals and other contaminants, boat strikes, as well as hunting and egg poaching. (NMFS 2007)

SeaTurtles.org is particularly concerned that the Hawaii longline fishery for swordfish exceeded its legal take of green sea turtles in 2011. Between January to September 16, 2011, there were four observed green turtle interactions in the Hawaii surface longline fishery for swordfish, when the incidental take limit in the 2008 Biological Opinion authorized the take of three green turtles over a three-year period, including one mortality. (NMFS 2012). The fact that the Hawaii longline fishery continues to violate the ESA and harm sea turtle populations, and that the regional fishery council intends to expand this and other deadly surface longline fisheries in the Pacific including American Samoa, provides ample evidence that caution is needed when it comes to weakening the federal protective status of Hawaiian green sea turtles and other sea turtle species.

3. The Resolutions Make Inaccurate Statements

HCR 14 states that “the honu is approaching full recovery.” Based on the fact that an average of 400 Hawaiian green sea turtles nested every year between 2002 and 2009, and that the recovery goal is 5,000 breeding females, the honu is nowhere near approaching full recovery.

HCR 14 states that the environment and ecosystem are suffering from the current over protection and over population hon. If Hawaiian green sea turtles have not met recovery goals under the ESA, it is not accurate to say that they are “over protected” or “over populated.” In fact, SeaTurtles.org cannot find a definition for the terms “over protection” or “over population” in the context of sea turtle protection under the ESA.

4. The Resolution is Premature

Given that National Marine Fisheries Service is now considering whether to designate distinct population segments for the green sea turtles and delist the species under the ESA, HCR 14 is premature and not based on science. A resolution from the Hawaiian House of Representatives on the status of Hawaiian green sea turtles would be more timely once NMFS makes its regulatory findings.

Vote No on HCR 14

Many of our members, families, and friends have shared stories about the incredible sea turtle experiences they have had while visiting Hawaii when swimming with sea turtles or observing them basking on rocks and outcroppings. As a result, we believe that there is strong national and international support for continued protection for the Hawaiian green sea turtle. Decreasing protections for these iconic ocean dwellers by delisting them or allowing greater numbers to die as a result of human activities would draw widespread opposition and likely cast a shadow on tourism to the state.

SeaTurtles.org strongly opposes removing the Hawaiian sea turtle from ESA protections until it meets stated recovery goals. We believe that is premature and possibly illegal to take such action to remove the Hawaiian green sea turtle from ESA protections until that time.

For these reasons, SeaTurtles.org opposes HCR 14 and urges that the members of the Committee on Ocean, Marine Resources and Hawaiian Affairs vote “no” on this unnecessary, inaccurate and premature resolution.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely yours,

Comments: Aloha Chair Hanohano and Committee Members, I am in opposition to the resolution because my understanding of the science regarding honu's recovery is that it is far from recovered. In addition, because so many of our reefs are suffering from an overabundance of the alien algae that honu love to eat, it is clear that our ecosystems are suffering from a LACK of honu rather than too many of them. With the reduction of so many fish that eat algae and keep it from overtaking our coral reefs, allowing the continued recovery of our honu will benefit everyone. Mahalo for your consideration, Rene Umberger For the Fishes

I oppose and I am very concerned about this resolution to de-list green sea turtles.

I have been coordinating the sea turtle stranding network on Maui for over 10 years so am very familiar with their status. The following are my concerns:

1. While turtle numbers are increasing, there are still many with fibropapilloma disease. These turtles have tumors that are visible. I believe people will not want to eat the turtles with tumors and will take the healthy ones which may be developing a resistance to the disease. This will leave the sick turtles in the population.
2. Sea turtles take many years to reach maturity and reproduce. It would not take long to seriously reduce their numbers and many years for recovery.
3. Our sea turtles have lived with protection and reverence for the past 35 years. They are not afraid of humans. I have been diving in many other parts of the pacific and as soon as a turtle see a person, it swims away as fast as it can. The turtles in Hawai'i don't do that. It is one of the few places in the world where people and turtles swim together.
4. The Hawksbill turtle is still critically endangered. Many people cannot see the difference between the green and hawksbill. I am concerned that hawksbills will be killed accidentally.
5. Some people are claiming that "environment and ecosystem are suffering from the current over-protection and over-population of honu". This is just not true. The truth is, the environment and ecosystem are suffering from an over population of humans. There is not an over-population of honu. There were likely many more honu in Hawai'i before humans were here.
6. We do not have enough enforcement officers to enforce fishing laws.

If honu are to be de-listed, we must be very careful about a return to hunting them. We have a success story here. They were almost hunted to extinction when the population of the islands was much smaller. Can we manage people to do the right thing and not do it again?

Good Afternoon Chair and Committee Members,

My name is Kimberly Gilfillan. I work in Honolulu and live in Waialua. I am an avid scuba diver, PADI scuba instructor and care very deeply about the health of our oceans and protecting all marine life including our Hawaiian Green Sea Turtle “Honu”. I am member of Turtle Island Restoration Network and support comments that it submitted to the Committee.

I am here to urge your “no” vote on HCR14, which urge the federal government to remove the honu from protections under the Endangered Species Act.

I have seen green sea turtles entangled in fishing lines outside my home and watched them struggle to get free. I have helped in the rescue of many sea turtles. And I have assisted in monitoring and counting sea turtles with government scientists.

Based on the science, I do not think honu populations have recovered to the point of being removed from the Endangered Species List.

An average of 400 to 500 Hawaiian green sea turtles nested every year between 2002 and 2010. Last year a record 843 green sea turtles nested.

However those numbers fall far short of the requirement that 5,000 green sea turtles must nest each year for six consecutive years in order to reach recovery goals under the Endangered Species Act.

HCR14 Testimony

Please do not pass HCR 14. We must continue to protect green sea turtles because if we don't they may become extinct. These turtles are beautiful ocean creatures that are being depleted due to pollution, depletion of their food supply, and human carelessness. Has an assessment even been done to see how many turtles there are still left? If not, then these turtles should be protected until such time an appropriate assessment is completed. I also fear that if these turtles aren't protected that humans will deplete the population too quickly and before we are even aware of it, they may dwindle down to a population of zero. Therefore, I am asking that you please not pass HCR14. Thank you.

Shanna Kodo

I oppose the de-listing of the Hawaiian Green Sea turtle (Chelonia mydas) from the Endangered Species List. Green Sea turtles are slow to sexual maturity, 15-30 years before a successful clutch is produced. 1 out of 100 eggs laid will succeed to maturity, making green sea turtle population particularly vulnerable to extinction through poaching, hunting and fishing. Under current protection of the Endangered Species Act Hawaiian green sea turtles continue to be poached. If protection should be removed our sea turtle population would once again become endangered of extinction. De-listing the Hawaiian green sea turtle would be an environmental, economic and political disaster. I strongly oppose the de-listing of the Hawaiian green sea turtle.

RE: H.C.R. No. 14

Aloha,

My name is Darla White and I am submitting testimony on behalf of myself, and my professional expertise as a marine scientist.

I strongly oppose the proposal to de-list the Hawaiian Green Sea Turtle, Chelonia mydas, from the threatened status under the Endangered Species Act for the following reasons:

The Hawaiian population of green sea turtle, while making a strong comeback in numbers, continues to be plagued by fibropapilloma tumors and commercial fishing practices. But more importantly, this population is facing a much bigger threat: sea level rise (SLR). It is a well known fact that 90% of the Hawaiian green sea turtle population in Hawaii nest at French Frigate Shoals in the Papahānaumokuākea Marine National Monument (PMNM). It has also been announced by the PMNM that SLR is the greatest threat that this special place faces, due to the low islands characteristic of the atolls in this region. French Frigate Shoals (FFS) is only 2m above sea level. What many people do not understand is that wave run-up, storm surge, and tides play a significant role in the overall reach of the water. A sea level rise of 12" (1') in a beach area can equal 150' of inland inundation (Leatherman et al. 2000). The current predictions estimate a rise of 8" – 24" (2') for this region by 2100 (Karl et al eds. 2009). SLR is a pervasive threat on the future of the population of the Hawaiian green sea turtle.

Secondly, the proposed bill has some really egregious misinformation in it, specifically:

WHEREAS, today, scientific studies as well as reports by

19 Native Hawaiian lawaia (cultural practitioners of fishing) have

20 concluded that the honu population is approaching full recovery

21 and that the environment and ecosystem are suffering from the

22 current over-protection and over-population of honu; and

As a working marine scientist in the state and well informed on these issues, I can state emphatically that there are no environments or ecosystems that are 'suffering' or even impacted from the erroneously misstated 'over-population' of honu. There is even a conflict written in: "approaching full recovery" and "overpopulation".

Lastly, the regulated or managed take of a species with such a late reproductive maturity (25 – 40 years old) would be deleterious for this species. The primary push for delisting is to enable take for food or 'cultural practice'. This species in no way fills the requirements as a source of food security, given their reproductive life history. We live in a world of plenty and markets have plenty of food...even the impoverished can acquire food stamps and/or grow food and fish. Cultural practitioners must recognize that with increasing human populations (currently estimated at 4x what it was when they were listed), this species cannot withstand the fishing pressure that will follow de-listing. And how many fishers do you know that will eat a sick turtle? And in some cases, the fibropapilloma tumors are internal. That would put pressure on the healthy proportion of the population.

For the numerous reasons listed here, I strongly oppose the delisting of the Hawaiian green sea turtle, Chelonia mydas.

Mahalo,

Darla White

The boats kill them.....and they really aren't strong enough yet and don't know to run from the hunters anymore. They would be slaughtered No turtles would reduce tourism, lower incomes... Comments: Aloha, I oppose this measure. I have been a spearfisherman for over 47 years and a commercial fisherman for over 35. When it was legal I took turtle to feed my family. It is very easy if you knew when where and how. I also experienced a rapid decline of the honu population until the no take law. The only way to preserve the turtle population is to not take at all. There is no difference between a thousand people taking one turtle each and one person taking a thousand turtles. Tiger sharks will keep nature in balance. Enforcement will be an issue. Mahalo

Comments: I do not support delisting the Hawaiian green sea turtle from threatened status or designating the Hawaiian green sea turtle as a distinct species under the Endangered Species Act. Consequently, I do not support HCR 14. I do not believe the State of Hawaii or the Department of Land and Natural Resources has sufficient resources to take on the responsibility to effectively manage Hawaiian green sea turtles at sustainable levels or enforce a green sea turtle management plan. Given the current economic challenges and competing priorities facing the state, I do not see this situation changing in the foreseeable future. Also, having frequent interaction with residents, guests and tourists at public outreach and education venues, I encounter many people who express delight and/or a desire to see a green sea turtle in it's natural habitat. The beloved Honu is a resource and marine treasure that needs to be protected. Because of the endangered and protective status the green sea turtle has worldwide, I believe there would be tremendous public outcry, negative publicity and ill will toward Hawaii if we passed a resolution advocating delisting the Hawaiian green sea turtle so that it can be "harvested" or "slaughtered" ! Harvesting the Honu could result in a boycott by travelers as well as a significant loss of tourism dollars and jeopardize an already tenuous economic recovery in the state.

Comments: Hawaii's green sea turtles aren't just another animal that has recovered because of protected status. Their ubiquitous numbers have rendered them a staple of Hawaii's tourism. The turtles are each worth far more to the state alive and swimming than on someone's dinner table. As much as they have rebounded, it wouldn't take a very heavy fishing pressure to dirty Hawaii's name in the ecotourism industry. Lastly, there is the issue of the resemblance to another, much more endangered organism, the hawksbill sea turtle. Allowing the taking of green sea turtles would almost certainly have an impact on hawksbills, which haven't enjoyed the protection offered to their green cousins. Therefore I urge you to leave green sea turtles on the protected list. Thank you for your time.

Comments: We all know that as the size of the human population increases more pressure is put on food resources. In 1970 Maui's population was about 39,000 and take was mostly for subsistence use by friends and family. In July, 2011 Maui's population was about 159,000 - 4 times larger and commercial take of seafood had greatly increased to meet the increasing demand of both residents and our growing visitor population. Despite the small population and more local use of turtles in the years leading up to 1970, the number of green sea turtles was already in decline and were almost driven to extinction. Thus they were put on the endangered species list. With today's increased demand de-listing will lead to a more rapid decline. Some species, like the whales and turtles, are more valuable to Hawaii's residents alive than dead. It is our duty to malama those species which are particularly sensitive to over-exploitation. Thus I encourage all Hawaiians to support further protection.

Comments: Turtles are already taken even with this ban in place. We have so little left traversing the reefs without tumors. Not to mention many will mistake the hawksbill when hunting and any killed will greatly increase the probability that we will loose this species of turtle. It is hard enough to enforce poaching of turtles now. All need protection until we can stop the toxic run off we now have effecting all ocean creature health. Please put this aside until a plan is in place to fully understand how to protect our main resource, the ocean. Our diseased turtles are the canaries in the coal mine. Mahalo!

Comments: Aloha, Please do not pass this bill. There are a number of reasons why harvesting of the Green Sea Turtles should not be harvested at this time. Here are three: 1. The Green Sea Turtle closely resembles the severely endangered Hawksbill Turtle. If Harvesting of the Green Sea Turtles is allowed, there would certainly be Hawksbills harvested by mistake. We cannot allow this happen. 2.While the Green Turtles are now more plentiful than in 1978, there is no scientific evidence that they have reached the level of abundance that they were pre-European contact, when presumably they were abundant. Nor is there evidence as to what the correct or natural level may be. 3.Turtles are a favorite of tourists. They draw crowds a the Kahekili Herbivore Fisheries Management Area, KHFMA, where I volunteer with the Kaanapali Makai Watch. They are far more valuable to the economy as an "eco-tourist" attraction than as turtle soup. The reverse is true of Green or accidental Hawksbill harvesting. This would be a black-eye to to Hawaii in the minds of many eco-tourists. If Tourism is a driver of our economy, the environment is the economy. Please help Hawaiian waters to recover from overfishing. This is not the time for harvesting turtles. Aloha, John Seebart

Comments: I strongly oppose this legislation. Climate changes and the overall threats from global industrialization make the extinction of the green sea turtle, along with so many other species, a very real possibility, if not probability, in the decades to come. We must not leave our grandchildren a world bereft of the diversity and beauty that once thrived and made us who we are as human beings and as Hawaiians.

Comments: I believe the Hawaiian Green Sea turtle (Chelonia mydas) should remain protected, especially since the notice states that the population is "approaching" full recovery. If cultural subsistence is required after the population has "reached" or "exceeded" full recovery, then allow a permitting process and reporting for cultural subsistence ONLY, to ensure harvesting is sustainable to keep the population from crashing again.

Comments: If the green sea turtles are delisted, they will be hunted to extinction again within two years. I dive and snorkel on Maui. In parking lots and on beaches I hear tourists exclaim about the excitement of seeing our sea turtles. Diving is a multi million dollar industry in small countries, like Fiji. In 2007, diving brought in something like 24 million dollars, there. We need to SAVE our sea life and promote as an attraction, not kill it and eat it. We have a whole generation, maybe two, of people in Hawaii who have never eaten sea turtle and they seem non the worse for it. Let's keep it that way! The turtle's value as a tourist attraction far outweighs their value as a food source.

Comments: I am strongly opposed to HCR14 which urges the US to recognize the recovery of the green sea turtle and de-list it as an environmentally protected species. By allowing this to happen, you will open the floodgates for commercial harvesting of the green sea turtle which eventually will again make it an endangered species. NO! DO NOT PASS this resolution!

To: National Marine Fisheries Service

Subject: Protect Hawaiian Green Sea Turtles; Do Not Delist Hawaii's Green Sea Turtles (NOAA-NMFS-2012-0154)

Letter: Dear National Marine Fisheries Service,

Re: NOAA-NMFS-2012-0154

I support protecting critical habitat for Pacific green sea turtles and strongly oppose removing Endangered Species Act protections for the beloved Hawaiian population, known by natives as honu.

In Hawaii, the honu are rebounding from just 67 nesting females to over 800 now. However, their population is far short of the published goal of 5,000 Pacific green sea turtles needed to declare them as recovered.

Do your duty to halt the current movement to allow the slaughter of Hawaiian sea turtles on public beaches for their meat and shells, to be sold to restaurants and turned into souvenirs. Their continued survival depends on retaining protections under the Endangered Species Act and gaining safeguards for their critical habitats.

The honu is far more valuable to me, and the $12 billion tourism industry enjoyed by Hawaii, alive than dead. Protect them, their foraging reefs, and their beaches for current and future generations to enjoy.

Sincerely,
