Comments: Aloha, As an avid dancer I find it horrible how the system wants people to be afraid to dance. Dancing is a joyous activity as long as we respect each other. People should be allowed to bob their heads, snap their fingers and even shimmy their hips if the rhythm moves them. Hula which was the way that most information was passed in Hawaii should not be restricted anywhere in Hawaii. The Liquor Control has many special conditions that regulate a patron's actions inside an establishment that serves alcohol. I feel dancing should not be one of the things that they regulate, but if they do, there should be allowances for flowing movement. Currently the rules discriminate against people who have too much joy in their step and people like me who have a disability that will not allow them to stand still for any long amounts of time. I am grateful that the doctors performed many surgeries on my legs that allow me to dance each step of my life. Mahalo for listening to my concerns. Anthony Simmons
