The Honorable Joy A. San Buenaventura, Vice Chair
Members of the House Committee on Judiciary

From: Liann Ebesugawa, Chair and Commissioners of the Hawai‘i Civil Rights Commission

Re: H.B. No. 1782, H.D. 1

The Hawai‘i Civil Rights Commission (HCRC) has enforcement jurisdiction over Hawai‘i’s laws prohibiting discrimination in employment, housing, public accommodations, and access to state and state funded services (on the basis of disability). The HCRC carries out the Hawai‘i constitutional mandate that no person shall be discriminated against in the exercise of their civil rights. Art. I, Sec. 5.

The HCRC supports H.B. No. 1782, H.D. 1, and urges you to return the bill to its original form amending HRS § 378-2.5(c) to reduce the “look back” limitation on employer consideration of convictions that bear a rational relationship to the job from ten years from time of conviction to five years for felonies and three years for misdemeanors, excluding periods of incarceration.

H.B. No. 1782, H.D. 1 amends HRS § 378-2.5(c) to reduce the “look back” limitation on employer consideration of convictions that bear a rational relationship to the job from ten years from time of conviction to an unspecified period for felonies and an unspecified period for misdemeanors, excluding periods of incarceration.

Under HRS § 378-2, it is unlawful to discriminate in employment on the basis of arrest and court record – this includes refusing to hire, barring from employment, discharging, or otherwise discriminating in compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment.

HRS § 378-2.5 and HRS §§ 378-3 (8) and (9) provide several exceptions to the arrest and court record protection which allow Hawai'i employers and Hawai'i employment agencies to engage in limited inquiry or consideration of a current employee or applicant's conviction. Under these exceptions, an employer may only inquire about or consider a conviction of a current employee or of an applicant for employment who has already received a conditional offer of employment, that occurred no more than ten years before the date of application, excluding any period of incarceration. A conviction can only be considered if it has a rational relationship to the core duties and responsibilities of the job.

Any category of Hawai'i employer expressly listed in HRS § 378-2.5(d) as permitted to inquire into and consider an applicant's conviction record may do so to the extent allowed by the statutory exemption.

In its original form, H.B. No. 1782 would have changed the look back window from ten years to five years for felonies and three years for misdemeanors, excluding periods of incarceration. This change is meant to reduce employment barriers and improve likelihood of successful reentry for workers who have records of criminal conviction(s) and have served their time and paid their debt to society. Previous testimony submitted regarding recidivism rates supports the original proposal in H.B. No. 1782.

The HCRC supports H.B. No. 1782, H.D. 1, and urges you to amend it to include a look back period of five years for felony convictions and three years for misdemeanor convictions.

History of Hawai'i Arrest & Court Record Law

1973 Act 54

The Hawai'i fair employment statute was first amended to prohibit discrimination on the basis of arrest and court record in 1973, when House Bill No. 656 was enacted as Act 54.

Act 54 amended the prohibited discriminatory practices section of our fair employment law, HRS § 378-2, to prohibit an employer from discriminating on the basis of arrest and court record in hiring, discharge, term and conditions, and advertising or publication, and also prohibited labor organizations from discriminating on that new protected basis.

Act 54 expressly excluded records of conviction from the definition of “arrest and court records”, in HRS § 378-1(6):

“Arrest and court records” include any information about an individual having been questioned, apprehended, taken into custody or detention, held for investigation, charged with an offense, served a summons, arrested with or without a warrant and tried, pursuant to any law or military authority. Convictions are not included in this definition.

The 1973 law did not protect against inquiries into and consideration of records of conviction in employment. The House position was to include convictions within the scope of the definition and protection, but the Senate position excluding convictions prevailed.

1974 Act 205

The statute was amended the following year to expressly add protection against discrimination on the basis of record of conviction. House Bill No. 2485 was enacted in 1974 as Act 205.

Act 205 amended the HRS § 378-1(6) definition of “arrest and court records” to include conviction records:

“Arrest and court records” include any information about an individual having been questioned, apprehended, taken into custody or detention, held for investigation, charged with an offense, served a summons, arrested with or without a warrant, tried or convicted pursuant to any law enforcement or military authority.

The purpose language of Act 205 is sweeping in scope:

SECTION 1. Purpose. The purpose of this Act is to encourage and contribute to the rehabilitation of convicted persons and to assist those persons in their assumption of the responsibilities of citizenship. To this end, the legislature finds it a well-established principle of American jurisprudence that an occupation and equal access thereto is “property” within the meaning of Article 1, section 4, of the Hawaii Constitution, which guarantees that, “No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law ...”

The Senate Committee on Judiciary reported:

Correctional officers and probation and parole officials emphasize that gainful employment is essential in the process of re-socializing criminal offenders.

Your Committee realizes that if enacted, the bill would not provide any magical cure to the employment problems of the convicted person. He will still find difficulty when seeking jobs. Passage of this bill, however, would represent a recognition by this Legislature that persons who have been in trouble are not inherently and permanently bad and that opportunities afforded other citizens should be made available to them.

The 1974 legislative history includes committee report language to the effect that employers may disqualify or refuse employment based on a conviction record that is either rationally connected or directly related to the occupation sought, but on its face the statute did not provide for an such an exception.

1998 Act 174

In 1998, House Bill No. 2967, enacted as Act 174, created a statutory exception to the arrest and court record exception. Act 174 added express exception language allowing post-offer inquiry into and consideration of records of convictions, less than ten years from date of conviction, bearing a rational relationship to the duties and responsibilities of the job:

§378-2.5 Employer inquiries into conviction record. (a) Subject to subsection (b) an employer may inquire about and consider an individual's criminal conviction record concerning hiring, termination, or the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment; provided that the conviction record bears a rational relationship to the duties and responsibilities of the position.

(b) Inquiry into and consideration of conviction records for prospective employees shall take place only after the prospective employee has received a conditional offer of employment which may be withdrawn if the prospective employee has a conviction record that bears a rational relationship to the duties and responsibilities of the position.

(c) For purposes of this section, "conviction" means an adjudication by a court of competent jurisdiction that the defendant committed a crime, not including final judgments required to be confidential pursuant to section 571-84; provided that the period for which the employer may examine the employee's conviction record shall not exceed ten years.

Note: The post-offer inquiry and consideration concept was modeled after the IRCA I-9 employment authorization verification process.

2003 Act 95

In 2003, Senate Bill No. 830, which was enacted as Act 95.

Act 95 amended the arrest and court record protection in two ways:

- Periods of incarceration were excluded from the 10 year "look back" period. The concern here was that employers would not be able to consider the convictions of murderers who served more than ten years of a prison term.

- The statute was amended to make it clear that employers who have a statutory exception can make pre-offer inquiries into conviction records. These statutory exceptions vary in their terms, and are defined by statute. In our view, this express provision clarifies and codified existing law, and did not represent a substantive change. This amendment is useful in that it consolidates a list of statutory exceptions, although the list is not exclusive.

The 2003 legislation also changed the way that state and county employers can consider arrest and court record convictions: allowing the use of arrest records as the basis for public employer investigations for “suitability”; and use of the rational relationship standard for public employers, rather than the evidence of rehabilitation standard previously required.

Enacted in 2003, Act 95 amended § 378-2.5, Hawaii Revised Statutes, to read as follows:

"[E]§378-2.5[3] Employer inquiries into conviction record. (a) Subject to subsection (b), an employer may inquire about and consider an individual's criminal conviction record concerning hiring, termination, or the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment; provided that the conviction record bears a rational relationship to the duties and responsibilities of the position.

(b) Inquiry into and consideration of conviction records for prospective employees shall take place only after the prospective employee has received a conditional offer of employment which may be withdrawn if the prospective employee has a conviction record that bears a rational relationship to the duties and responsibilities of the position.

(c) For purposes of this section, "conviction" means an adjudication by a court of competent jurisdiction that the defendant committed a crime, not including final judgments required to be confidential pursuant to section 571-84; provided that the ~~[period for which the]~~ employer may ~~[examine]~~ consider the employee's conviction record falling within a period that shall not exceed the most recent ten years[-], excluding periods of incarceration. If the employee or prospective employee claims that the period of incarceration was less than what is shown on the employee's or prospective employee's conviction record, an employer shall provide the employee or prospective employee with an opportunity to present documentary evidence of a date of release to establish a period of incarceration that is shorter than the sentence imposed for the employee's or prospective employee's conviction.

(d) Notwithstanding subsections (b) and (c), the requirement that inquiry into and consideration of a prospective employee's conviction record may take place only after the individual has received a conditional job offer, and the limitation to the most recent ten-year period, excluding the period of incarceration, shall not apply to employers who are expressly permitted to inquire into an individual's criminal history for employment purposes pursuant to any federal or state law other than subsection (a), including:

(1) The State or any of its branches, political subdivisions, or agencies pursuant to section 831-3.1 and section 78- ;

(2) The department of education pursuant to section 302A-A;

(3) The department of health with respect to employees, providers, or subcontractors in positions that place them in direct contact with clients when providing non-witnessed direct mental health services on behalf of the child and adolescent mental health division pursuant to section 321- ;

(4) The judiciary pursuant to section 571-34;

(5) The counties pursuant to section 846- ;

- (6) Armed security services pursuant to section 261-17(b);
- (7) Providers of a developmental disabilities domiciliary home pursuant to section 333F-22;
- (8) Private schools pursuant to section 378-3(8) and section 302A-B;
- (9) Financial institutions in which deposits are insured by a federal agency having jurisdiction over the financial institution pursuant to section 378-3(9);
- (10) Detective agencies and security guard agencies pursuant to sections 463-6(b) and 463-8(b);
- (11) Employers in the business of insurance pursuant to section 431:2-201.3;
- (12) Employers of individuals or supervisors of individuals responsible for screening passengers or property under 49 U.S.C. §44901 or individuals with unescorted access to an aircraft of an air carrier or foreign carrier or in a secured area of an airport in the United States pursuant to 49 U.S.C. §44936(a);
- (13) The department of human services pursuant to section 352-5.5;
- (14) The public library system pursuant to section 302A-A;
- (15) The department of public safety pursuant to section 353C-5;
- (16) The board of directors of a cooperative housing corporation or the manager of a cooperative housing project pursuant to section 421I- ; and
- (17) The board of directors of an association of apartment owners, or the manager of a condominium project pursuant to section 514A-82.1."

Note: HRS § 378-2.5(d) has been subsequently amended since enactment of Act 95 in 2003, to add to or clarify the list of employers who are expressly permitted to inquire into an individual's criminal history for employment purposes pursuant to federal or state law.

RELATING TO EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION

The Office of Hawaiian Affairs (OHA) STRONGLY SUPPORTS HB1782 HD1, a measure in OHA's 2020 Legislative Package. The original version of this bill would amend Hawai'i's current "ban the box" law to limit employers' allowable inquiry into applicants' conviction records from the previous ten year period (excluding periods of incarceration), to five years for felony convictions, and three years for misdemeanor convictions. By reducing the impacts of older, less relevant convictions on people seeking to obtain or maintain legitimate employment, this measure – particularly with the three- and five-year limits as originally drafted – would discourage employment decisions that are expressly or unconsciously based on such convictions; reduce the stigma carried by former offenders; make it easier for those that have paid their debt to society obtain legitimate employment to support themselves and their 'ohana; and support the rehabilitation, reentry, and recidivism prevention goals of the state. OHA notes that HB1782 purposefully does not affect state and county employment processes and state and county lookback authorities.

Hawai'i's "ban the box" law seeks to limit the impact that convictions may have on the employment prospects of those who have a criminal history, but who have paid their debt to society, by limiting how far back an employer may look into an employee's or prospective employee's conviction record.<sup>1</sup> While progressive when adopted,<sup>2</sup> research now shows that the law's current allowable "lookback period" may be excessively long, such that it may undermine the aims of its underlying policy. Specifically, HRS § 378-2.5 explicitly allows employers to "inquire about and consider" their current or prospective employees' conviction records for the past ten-year period, exclusive of time served, and to make employment decisions based on convictions with a vaguely-defined "rational relationship" to the job at hand. With studies demonstrating that even old and minor convictions may significantly bias employers against those seeking legitimate and gainful employment,<sup>3</sup> this ten-year lookback period may inhibit even those who have demonstrated years of continuous lawful behavior from obtaining or maintaining a job, preventing them from supporting themselves and their families through legitimate employment, and frustrating the state’s goals of offender rehabilitation, reentry, and recidivism prevention.

<sup>2</sup> Many jurisdictions, with Hawai'i leading the way, have since passed "ban the box" laws prohibiting employers from discriminating against current or prospective employees based on their criminal record information.

<sup>3</sup> See Dylan Minor et al., Criminal Background and Job Performance, 7 J. OF LABOR POLICY 8 (2018), <https://izajolp.springeropen.com/articles/10.1186/s40173-018-0101-0> (summarizing studies indicating the diminished employment prospects of individuals with criminal records).

Notably, the old convictions that the current “ban the box” law specifically allows employers to consider may have little bearing on an individual’s likelihood of committing a new crime, or on their overall employability. For example, recidivism data show that former offenders who recidivate overwhelmingly do so within the first two years of release.<sup>4</sup> Further, studies show that those with older conviction records (6-7 years) are about as likely to commit a new crime as those with no criminal history whatsoever.<sup>5</sup> With regard to overall employability, studies show that those with conviction records tend to “have a longer tenure and are less likely to quit their jobs voluntarily than other workers,”<sup>6</sup> and a significant majority of surveyed managers and human resource professionals found that the “quality of hire” of workers with conviction records was the same or better than that of those without any convictions.<sup>7</sup>

Accordingly, by reducing the ten-year lookback period allowed under current law – particularly to the three- and five- year lookback periods, as originally proposed under this measure – HB1782 HD1 would better serve the original intent of HRS § 378-2.5, allowing employers to continue considering recent conviction records in their hiring and other employment decisions, while relieving people with older convictions from the largely unjustified stigma and bias they would otherwise face in seeking or maintaining legitimate employment. This in turn may enable such individuals to better support themselves and their families, allow them to better contribute to their communities as well as the state’s economy, and encourage their continued law-abiding behavior – promoting public safety and the state’s interests in rehabilitation, reentry, and recidivism prevention over the long term.

As a final note, OHA emphasizes that this bill would not affect current exceptions to the “ban the box” law’s limitations, such as those for jobs in public safety or schools, nor would it affect current statutory provisions that otherwise allow the use of conviction or related records (i.e., sex offender registry, etc.) in making employment decisions.

House Bill No. 1782 H.D. 1
Relating to Employment Discrimination

TO CHAIRPERSON LEE, VICE CHAIR SAN BUENAVENTURA AND MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE:

The purpose of House Bill No. 1782 H.D.1 is to limit the convictions that may be used in employment decisions from all convictions to an undetermined length of time.

As introduced, the original bill limited this “lookback” period for felony convictions that occurred in the most recent five years and misdemeanor convictions that occurred in the most recent three years. Current law allows for the most recent ten-year lookback excluding periods of incarceration.

DHRD supports the intent of this measure. We note that the industry standard for background check companies is to “lookback” at the most recent 7-year period. As such, we respectfully request that this be bill amended to reflect a 7-year “lookback” for both felonies and misdemeanors.

Thank you very much for the opportunity to testify on this measure.

Testimony on behalf of the
Hawai‘i State Commission on the Status of Women
Khara Jabola-Carolus, Executive Director

Prepared for the House Committee on Judiciary

In support of HB1782 HD1 with amendments
Monday, February 24, 2020, at 2:00 p.m. in Room 325

Dear Chair Lee, Vice Chair San Buenaventura, and Honorable Members,

The Hawai‘i State Commission on the Status of Women provides the following testimony in support of HB1782 HD1 and proposes an amendment to restore the bill to its original language. The bill should limit the convictions that may be used in employment decisions from all convictions in the most recent ten years to felony convictions that occurred in the most recent five years and misdemeanor convictions that occurred in the most recent three years.

The Commission supports shortening the current “lookback period,” or length of time that employers are able to look back into an individual’s criminal record, because this would increase access to capital and formal employment for formerly incarcerated women, including and especially transgender women. Employment discrimination based on criminal convictions can cause ramifying hardships for women, who oftentimes must rebuild their lives from scratch with little structural support.

Women are at particular risk of spiraling into cycles of abuse and exploitation if unable to secure stable employment and financial independence. Thus, this measure is an important step to remove barriers for unemployed women with criminal records and to prevent their exploitation.

Proposals for a seven-year lookback period are deficient because would continue to pose an unnecessarily high barrier to employment. This “industry standard” traces to the Fair Credit Reporting Act, which has become “another enabling mechanism of the proliferating background check industry” and is yet another “result of misconceptions of what it means to have a criminal record.”<sup>1</sup> In addition:

- Unemployment is one of the most powerful determinants of re-offense because it is a critical form of stability;
- The original draft will not impact the legally mandated discrimination, i.e., the general prohibition against the use of criminal record-based employment decisions for jobs in public safety or the educational system;
- Certain felony convictions do not require supervision beyond the three and five periods proposed by the original draft of this measure; misdemeanors are sentenced to one year of probation; petty misdemeanor are sentenced to 6 months and up to a year of probation.

Accordingly, the Commission respectfully urges the Committee to pass HB1782 HD1 with a five year “lookback” window for felony convictions and three years for misdemeanor convictions.

Sincerely,

Khara Jabola-Carolus

RE: H.B. 1782, H.D. 1; RELATING TO EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION.

Chair Lee, Vice Chair San Buenaventura, and members of the House Committee on Judiciary, the Office of the Prosecuting Attorney of the County of Kaua'i submits the following testimony in support of H.B. 1782, H.D. 1.

A simple comparison of recidivism rates between formerly incarcerated people who work and those who don't indicates a strong positive correlation between unemployment and recidivism. If formerly incarcerated individuals can obtain a job with a wage that meets their basic needs, the risk of reoffending significantly decreases.<sup>1</sup>

Hawai'i's Adult Client Probation Service recognizes that people with certain convictions do not require supervision beyond the three and five periods similar to this measure. Except for Class A felonies,<sup>2</sup> people with low grade felonies are typically sentenced to 4-5 years of probation.<sup>3</sup> People with a misdemeanor are sentenced to one year of probation, and people convicted of a petty misdemeanor are sentenced to 6 months and up to a year of probation.<sup>4</sup>

This bill would not affect current exceptions to the general prohibition against the use of criminal record-based employment decisions (such as for jobs in public safety or the educational system), nor would it affect current statutory provisions that otherwise allow the use of conviction or related records (i.e., sex offender registry, etc.) in making employment decisions.

Hawai'i would set the national standard, once again, for employment protections for people with conviction records.<sup>5</sup> Also, Massachusetts recently changed its five year misdemeanor lookback period to three years.<sup>6</sup>

Unfortunately, there is an “industry standard” likely from the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA), which regulates most of the private sectors background check lookback periods.<sup>7</sup> The FCRA limits the “lookback period” for arrests to 7 years, and there is no limit on convictions, which is why “ban the box,” and other fair chance employment laws exist.

Businesses remain protected by the five and three year period, and benefit in many ways. Hawai'i businesses can utilize a six month federal insurance program,<sup>8</sup> which insures companies that employ people with conviction records for the first six months of employment. Further, employers can utilize the Work Opportunity Tax Credit offered by the State for hiring people with felony records.<sup>9</sup> Finally, research by economists confirms that hiring people with records is simply smart business.<sup>10</sup> Retention rates are higher, turnover is lower, and employees with criminal records are more loyal.<sup>11</sup>

Formerly incarcerated people are unemployed at a rate of over 27% — higher than the total U.S. unemployment rate during any historical period, including the Great Depression.<sup>12</sup>

Without passing this law, or significantly reducing the “ban the box” lookback period, people with conviction records will unnecessarily continue to struggle to find work, which hurts our community as a whole.

H.B. 1782, H.D. 1 would improve Hawai‘i’s “ban the box” law using recent research and would give our community members, who are trying to turn their lives around, a fair chance at employment.

For these reasons, the Office of the Prosecuting Attorney supports the passage of H.B. 1782, H.D. 1. Thank you for this opportunity to testify.

Re: Testimony of the ACLU of Hawai'i in Support of H.B. 1782, HD1

Dear Chair Lee and members of the Committee:

The American Civil Liberties Union of Hawai'i writes in support of H.B. 1782, HD1, which would limit the convictions that may be used in employment decisions from all convictions in the most recent ten years to felony convictions that occurred in a certain time period and misdemeanor convictions that occurred in a certain time period.

Denial of employment opportunities because of an individual's criminal record is a harsh collateral consequence that makes it more difficult for people to constructively build their lives. Collateral consequences are the additional penalties tied to a conviction that greatly impact an individual's capacity to engage socially and economically upon their sentence completion. These penalizations are not factored in to the calculation of sentencing, and are triggered outside the jurisdiction of the courts. It is continued punishment.

Without significantly reducing the "ban the box" lookback period, people with conviction records will unnecessarily continue to struggle to find work, which hurts our community as a whole. It is important to recognize that businesses not only remain protected by the five and three year period but they are also eligible for The Work Opportunity Tax Credit offered by the State for hiring people with felony records.<sup>1</sup> It is smart business for employers and provides positive opportunities for people who are trying to get back on their feet.

"A depressing loop I hear from formerly incarcerated folks is how, despite serving their sentences, they still feel like they're serving time. The shunning from employers, neighbors and friends can sound like they are not worthy of being "out." Stigma can prevent successful reintegration of people previously incarcerated,"<sup>2</sup> ACLU of Hawaii's Smart Justice Organizer stated in a recent Op Ed. To be clear, not everyone who has a conviction has been incarcerated.

If we are serious about reducing recidivism in our state, we need to remove barriers that keep people from living productive, healthy lives. Success comes when we improve post-conviction employment possibilities. This is why ACLU of Hawai'i supports H.B. 1782, HD 1.

Thank you for your time and the opportunity to submit testimony.

Sincerely,

STRONG SUPPORT FOR HB 1782 – EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION

Aloha Chair Lee, Vice Chair San Buenaventura and Members of the Committee!

My name is Kat Brady and I am the Coordinator of Community Alliance on Prisons, a community initiative promoting smart justice policies in Hawai'i for more than two decades. This testimony is respectfully offered on behalf of the families of JAMES BORLING SALAS, ASHLEY GREY, DAISY KASITATI, JOEY O'MALLEY, JESSICA FORTSON AND ALL THE PEOPLE WHO HAVE DIED UNDER THE "CARE AND CUSTODY" OF THE STATE, including the eleven (11) people that we know of, who have died in the last six (6) months. We also remind the committee of the approximately 5,200 Hawai'i individuals living behind bars or under the "care and custody" of the Department of Public Safety on any given day and we are always mindful that more than 1,200 of Hawai'i's imprisoned people are serving their sentences abroad thousands of miles away from their loved ones, their homes and, for the disproportionate number of incarcerated Kanaka Maoli, far, far from their ancestral lands.

HB 1782 limits the convictions that may be used in employment decisions from all convictions in the most recent ten years to felony convictions that occurred in the most recent five years and misdemeanor convictions that occurred in the most recent three years. The HD1 unspecifies the lookback years.

Community Alliance on Prisons is in strong support of the original version of this measure. Decreasing the lookback time will open up employment opportunities for those reintegrating with their communities, help our communities by increasing the number of people contributing to the tax base, and strengthening our families and communities.

Criminal records are one of the biggest barriers to employment for those who are transitioning from incarceration to their communities because of the stigma and bias that exists in society. When does someone stop paying for past mistakes?

Decreasing the look back time will open the door to a better life for so many people. Employers will still be allowed to consider recent convictions while relieving people with older convictions from the largely unjustified stigma and bias.

Community Alliance on Prisons urges the committee to pass this measure in the original version that will help so many people and communities thrive. Mahalo for this opportunity to testify.

Chair LEE, Vice Chair SAN BUENAVENTURA, and Members of the House Judiciary Committee

Common Cause Hawaii comments in support of HB 1782, HD1 which would limit the convictions that may be used in employment decisions from all convictions in the most recent ten years to felony convictions that occurred in a certain time period and misdemeanor convictions that occurred in a certain time period.

Common Cause Hawaii is a nonprofit, nonpartisan, grassroots organization dedicated to reforming government and strengthening democracy. Common Cause Hawaii understands that we need a democracy that guarantees a more equitable and just society. The mass criminalization and incarceration of the most vulnerable in our society disenfranchise and disempower our people and undermine the promise of a democracy that works for everyone.

HB 1782, HD1 will hopefully work to successfully transition people formerly incarcerated back into society. Employment is one of the biggest barriers for people who were formerly incarcerated. HB 1782, HD1 will reduce the stigma the formerly incarcerated face and still allow employers to consider recent, relevant convictions. HB 1782, HD1 is a step towards restoring people's faith in a working democracy for everyone.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment in support of HB 1782, HD1. If you have further questions of me, please contact me at sma@commoncause.org.

Very respectfully yours,

RE: HB 1782 HD1, RELATING TO EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION

Chair Lee, Vice Chair San Buenaventura, and Members of the Committee:

The Chamber of Commerce Hawaii ("The Chamber") has serious concerns with HB 1782 HD1, which limits the convictions that may be used in employment decisions from all convictions in the most recent ten years to felony convictions that occurred in a certain time period.

The Chamber is Hawaii's leading statewide business advocacy organization, representing about 2,000+ businesses. Approximately 80% of our members are small businesses with less than 20 employees. As the "Voice of Business" in Hawaii, the organization works on behalf of members and the entire business community to improve the state's economic climate and to foster positive action on issues of common concern.

The Chamber is concerned that the proposed look back periods of five years for felony convictions and three years for misdemeanor convictions does not provide enough time to determine rehabilitation. A 2018 U.S. Department of Justice report<sup>1</sup> conducted research on prisoner recidivism over a nine-year period from 2005 through 2014. This report looked at 401,288 state prisoners released in 2005 across 30 states, including Hawaii. Specifically, the report found that around 83% of state prisoners that were released were arrested at least once during the nine years following their release and that around 60% of these arrests occurred during years four through nine. Finally, we'd also note that in this study, it found that nearly 1 in 4 or 24% of prisoners that were released, were actually arrested during their ninth year following release.

Employers have shown a willingness to hire employees who have a prior conviction, but we need to also take into account costs related to hiring and training the employees, only to see them either quit or sent back to prison.

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on HB 1782 HD1.

Please help lift those in need of community up rather than extending their punishment and pain. This measure will:

- Reduce the stigma and other barriers and bias faced by people with old convictions
- Reduce the disproportionate impacts of conviction records and our criminal justice system as a whole on Native Hawaiians, women, and marginalized groups

I believe that the bill will make it harder for people with criminal records to find employment. People need to work and helping that person to find a job can be a game changer from doing crime. We cannot create laws that will make more poverty. Jails will not solve anything but hard work can make a person feel good about themselves and move forward. We cannot condemn a person because he or she has a criminal record. We as a society need to be more caring and help that person to get out of the rut. I know that a job is just a part of being in society and we as a people cannot put someone down because he or she made a mistake. I for an example have been convicted and went to jail and now doing my best to be part of society. I have learned by being educated have help alot of criminals with substance use and they have help others too. It is a chain reaction which can change lives if we start to care and give the proper help. Sometimes we think about money or the bottom line which is greed. We need to come up with better creative ideas to help the criminals, homeless, drug addicts and alcoholics. Penalizing, fines, jail, prison only creates more misery. Hawaii is expensive and people need to work hard and be a part of society. How can we let them suffer with this bill which will cause more incarceration. The prisons are full and cannot lock up more people because of the crimnial record. I know and have been denied many jobs because of my records. please give them a break and try and find better solutions with drug treatment and rehabiitation.

Please put back the 5 years for felonies and 3 years for misdemeanors that were in the original bill.

Mahalo!

Jen J.

Aloha,

I am a probation officer with the First Circuit Court and I am voicing my support for HB 1782. I believe that this bill will be a game changer in helping people with a criminal record to obtain gainful employment and to reduce recidivism overall.

The probationers I work with at the Circuit Court are felony cases and in the majority of these cases, they are sentenced to a term of probation for four years. During this four year period of being supervised, probation officers work with these individuals to develop more prosocial behavior. These individuals are instructed to obtain substance abuse treatment, mental health treatment, pay court fees, obtain employment, and in some cases perform community service. All of this is with the intention that by the time these individuals finish their four-year term of probation they will be contributing members to society. I know that on the District Court side for misdemeanor convictions, the probationers are sentenced to a term of probation for one year. These lengths of probation are in proportion to the severity of the crime that an individual was convicted of.

If a probationer has successfully met the terms and conditions of his/her court ordered probation then that means they have paid their debt to society. Why should this record follow them around for ten plus years, if they are demonstrating continuous law abiding behavior? I believe that minimizing an employment check of convictions to the most recent five year period for felony convictions and those the most recent three year period for misdemeanor convictions is both reasonable and proportional to the offense committed.

In pulling from my experience as a probation officer, employment is fundamentally crucial to a probationer's success. The ability to obtain a good job affects whether or not a person can pay rent, provide for their family, as well as maintain good mental health. All of this impacts whether or not the individual will commit another offense. When my probationers have good jobs, they feel better about themselves and are often more motivated to do well on probation, to stay clean and sober, and to have more purpose in their lives overall. There have been countless times where my probationers have told me that they were able to maintain their sobriety because they were working and keeping themselves busy by doing something useful. Employment is such a key part to reducing recidivism. Keeping these 5 year and 3 year time periods will allow individuals more years in the workforce and a better chance at continuing to rebuild their lives after serving their time.

I'm thinking of a few probationers in particular who have expressed to me how frustrating it is to apply for jobs and to be turned down time and time again due to their criminal record. They tell me that they have worked so hard to do better, to follow the terms and conditions of probation, to be more contributing members of society but they feel that their actions mean are for nothing. This is also disheartening as a probation officer because it is my job to assist individuals in becoming more prosocial members of society. How can this happen when we still have hiring practices that promote bias towards people with a criminal record? How can we encourage probationers to do better, if as it stands, this bias that comes with older convictions are preventing them from being gainfully employed? We need to do better and look at the research that demonstrates this. A 2017 ACLU Report entitled Back to Business: How Hiring Formerly Incarcerated Job Seekers Benefits Your Company did a case study of various employers such as Wal-Mart, Total Wine & More, and the US military who decided to hire ex-offenders. Across the board, these employers noted that turnover rates were lower for these employees and that motivation as well as company loyalty was higher as well.

This does not surprise me as a probation officer. As the probationers successfully meet the terms and conditions of their probation, they demonstrate an overwhelming motivation to get their life back on track. They want to do well and they can as long as measures are taken to remove the biases and the barriers that are in their way.

Recently, one of my probationers, after getting turned down for a job, frustratingly asked me "How do you expect me to do better if this is gonna follow me around for the rest of my life? It doesn't make any sense." I didn't know what to say to him because I was thinking the same thing. It doesn't make sense. If a probationer has successfully met the terms and conditions of his/her court ordered probation then they have paid their debt to society. Why should this record follow them around for such a long period of time, if they are demonstrating continuous law abiding behavior?

It doesn't make sense but I believe that this bill can help to fix that. If we are serious about reducing recidivism in this state, then we need to take the necessary measures to improve employment opportunities for ex-offenders. Reducing the employment check to 5 years for felonies and 3 years for misdemeanors is crucial. Lengthy criminal history record checks are leaving individuals who have paid their debt to society at a disadvantage and preventing a potential pool of job candidates from entering the workforce. This is why I'm asking for you to support HB 1782.

Mahalo,

Sarah Strong

NOTICE OF HEARING

DATE: Monday, February 24, 2020
TIME: 2:00pm
PLACE: Conference Room 325
State Capitol
415 South Beretania Street

To the chair, vice chair and members of this committee, my name is Jared Fukui and I'm writing in support for Bill HB1782. I do not personally represent any organizations and stand independently with this testimony. I'm currently a student at the University of Hawaii at Manoa majoring in Social Work. My academic experience is allowing me to learn and study social practices and skills needed to properly advocate and provide services to those who are underprivileged and or facing unfortunate circumstances. I find through my own personal experience as well as my education this matter happens to be one of these circumstances faced by individuals in our community.

I have personally experienced what it's like to face discrimination and bias due to having a criminal record and find it to be something overwhelmingly discouraging. I have been able to overcome these difficulties and now currently work as a Substance Abuse Counselor with an agency that brings me much satisfaction, the ability to provide for my family, and an opportunity to assist others suffering from a substance use disorder. Despite this, I still work with individuals on a daily basis who have significant amounts of difficulty finding employment, even with low wage and unskilled labor opportunities and most who have minor offenses. This is something that does not make logical sense to me and directly influences the recidivism being seen among those who have both misdemeanor and felony convictions. According to state Department of Business, Economic Development and tourism, data shows in 2020 a single person in the state of Hawaii will need to earn a minimum of seventeen dollars an hour to sufficiently support themselves. These statistics were given in relation to a Bill pushing for another minimum wage hike.

I would like to speak based on myself and the personal growth I have made with both felony and misdemeanor convictions. This congruent with the idea that people do change and shouldn't have to be judged based off their past for their entire life while trying to move forward. After moving to Hawaii from Kentucky I found myself facing some very trying times and difficulties adjusting to my new environment. This led me to a life engulfed with drugs and alcohol and battling severe depression for many years. I dropped out of high school in tenth grade and begun a life doing whatever I could to take care of myself. I was finally brought to a halt in 2014 with an arrest that resulted in my felony convictions. I found this day to be the best day of my life because it forced me to get the help I needed and allowed me to reevaluate my life. I was sentenced to eighteen months of incarceration and ten years' probation but released early to treatment. Since my release I have successfully completed two different Intensive Outpatient treatment programs, one before I was sentenced and the other, I was released to. While in treatment I enrolled at Leeward Community College to obtain my CSAC (certified substance abuse counselor) and was able to accomplish that. I then decided to continue in my academics receiving my associates in Liberal Arts and now a student with the Myron B. Thompson school of Social Work at the University of Hawaii. I was very fortunate and blessed to have been able to complete my field education for the CSAC with the same agency I was once a client and was then hired on as staff during the closing of my practicum study. Yes, my accomplishments are attributed to the hard work I had to put in, but also to the individuals who were able to bypass my convictions to give me a chance to prove I was a different person. Though not everyone will be given the opportunities I was, many are just as dedicated and have made the same changes and need a chance to show that without being shown bias whether directly or indirectly.

Bill HB1782 is making a statement that says people deserve a chance to earn a living without being judged based solely on their past, which happens many times when background checks are evaluated for hiring. The goal of public safety is just that, providing a safe environment for constituents of a particular community. Those who have made mistakes are still tax paying citizens and deserve the ability to make a decent earning wage. This isn't possible when majority of employers who offer living wages are relying on background checks as part of the hiring process, even when the convictions are past the supposed length of time for consideration.

All though it's perfectly understandable that there needs to be stipulations relating to someone's background for various types of employment, there also needs to be a limit put in place for skilled labor employers and those not considered low wage-earning positions. The pursuit of happiness is a right in our Declaration of Independence and does not state, unless you have a conviction. Part of this pursuit is the ability to provide for a family and one's self without worrying about finding employment due to a conviction you received 5 years prior and has no relation to the job description. For these reasons and my personal testament of experience I am fully supporting and advocating for Bill HB1782. Thank you for taking the time to read my testimony.

I strongly support HB1782 HD1. Employment is one of the biggest barriers for formerly incarcerated people. Three things that help people successfully transition back to the community are positive relationships, having a safe place to live, and meaningful employment. HB1782 HD1 reduces the stigma faced by formerly incarcerated people seeking employment. Employers will still be allowed to consider recent convictions while relieving people with older convictions from the largely unjustified stigma and bias. This bill opens the door to employment to many incredibly talented people ready to make a new start. Please move HB1782 HD1 forward.

Aloha,

HB 1782 HD1 would decrease the “look back” period of criminal history that employers may consider when making employment decisions. Please note that the proposed "look back" period only applies to non-exempt employers.

If we want individuals involved in the criminal justice system to eventually earn a living and become contributing members of our community, then we must reduce and eliminate legal barriers that make gainful employment more difficult and out of reach.

Please pass HB 1782 HD1.

Out of Prison & Out of Work: Unemployment among formerly incarcerated people

By Lucius Couloute and Daniel Kopf Tweet this
July 2018

Formerly incarcerated people need stable jobs for the same reasons as everyone else: to support themselves and their loved ones, pursue life goals, and strengthen their communities. But how many formerly incarcerated people are able to find work? Answering this fundamental question has historically been difficult, because the necessary national data weren't available — that is, until now.

Using a nationally representative dataset, we provide the first ever estimate of unemployment among the 5 million formerly incarcerated people living in the United States.

Our analysis shows that formerly incarcerated people are unemployed at a rate of over 27% — higher than the total U.S. unemployment rate during any historical period, including the Great Depression.

Our estimate of the unemployment rate establishes that formerly incarcerated people want to work, but face structural barriers to securing employment, particularly within the period immediately following release. For those who are Black or Hispanic — especially women — status as “formerly incarcerated” reduces their employment chances even more. This perpetual labor market punishment creates a counterproductive system of release and poverty, hurting everyone involved: employers, the taxpayers, and certainly formerly incarcerated people looking to break the cycle.

Fortunately, as the recommendations presented in this report illustrate, there are policy solutions available that would create safer and more equitable communities by addressing unemployment among formerly incarcerated people.
