Bill No. and Title: Senate Bill No. 639, S.D. 1, Relating to Courts of Appeal.

Purpose: Adds a new section to part I of Hawai'i Revised Statutes chapter 602 to prohibit the supreme court from affirming, modifying, reversing, or vacating a matter on grounds other than those raised by the parties to the proceeding, unless the parties are provided the opportunity to brief the court and present oral argument on the matter.

S.B. 639, S.D. 1, also adds a new section to part II of Hawai'i Revised Statutes chapter 602 to prohibit the intermediate appellate court from affirming, modifying, reversing, or vacating a matter on grounds other than those raised by the parties to the proceeding unless the parties are provided the opportunity to brief the court and present oral argument on the matter.

Judiciary's Position:

The Judiciary respectfully opposes this bill.

Article VI, section 7 of the Hawai'i Constitution sets forth the authority of the Hawai'i Supreme Court to promulgate rules, regulations and procedures for all state courts and provides:

The supreme court shall have power to promulgate rules and regulations in all civil and criminal cases for all courts relating to process, practice, procedure, and appeals, which shall have the force and effect of law.

In implementing its constitutional rulemaking authority, the Supreme Court adopted rules for all of the courts in the State. Some of the rules allow the courts to notice plain error, sua sponte, even in cases where the alleged error is not raised by the parties. For example, Rule 52(b) of the Hawai‘i Rules of Penal Procedure provides “[p]lain errors or defects affecting substantial rights may be noticed although they were not brought to the attention of the court.” Similarly, in implementing its constitutional rulemaking authority, the Supreme Court adopted an appellate rule that allows the appellate courts to notice plain error. Rule 28(b)(4) of the Hawai‘i Rules of Appellate Procedure provides that “[p]oints not presented in accordance with this section will be disregarded, except that the appellate court, at its option, may notice a plain error not presented.” (Emphasis added).

The Judiciary notes the Hawai‘i Supreme Court is not alone in adopting rules that permit appellate courts to consider plain errors. The plain error doctrine exists in virtually all, if not all, jurisdictions. It has been stated that “[e]nsuring fundamental fairness in trial is the beacon of plain error review.” Wend v. People, 235 P.3d 1089, 1098 (Colo. 2010); see United States v. Young, 470 U.S. 1, 15, 105 S.Ct. 1038, 84 L.Ed.2d 1 (1985). Rule 52(b) of the Hawai‘i Rules of Penal Procedure is based on the nearly identical provision of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and it is identically numbered. In fact, federal rule 52(b) serves as the template for the vast majority of the counterpart state rules, and provides that “[a] plain error that affects substantial rights may be considered even though it was not brought to the court’s attention.” As early as 1896, the United States Supreme Court recognized the plain error doctrine, see Wiborg v. United States, 163 U.S. 632 (1896), and to this day it remains an integral part of an appellate court’s responsibility in fulfilling its duties. In addition, S.B. 639, S.D. 1, would prohibit appellate courts from sua sponte affirming a lower court on a different legal basis when the ultimate decision is correct, but was based on an erroneous interpretation of law. See, e.g., Reyes v. Kuboyama, 76 Hawai‘i 137, 140 (1994) (“[W]here the circuit court’s decision is correct, its conclusion will not be disturbed on the ground that it gave the wrong reason for its ruling.”) (citations omitted). This well-established practice facilitates the efficient resolution of disputes, rather than requiring remand to the trial court.

Given the clear constitutional authority that article VI, section 7 provides to the Hawai‘i Supreme Court to promulgate rules and procedures for the courts of the State, the Judiciary believes S.B. 639, S.D. 1, infringes on that constitutional authority.

Accordingly, the concerns raised by this legislation should be presented to the Standing Committee to Review the Hawai‘i Rules of Appellate Procedure<sup>1</sup> where they can be fully vetted and then considered by the Supreme Court consistent with article VI, section 7. Therefore, the <sup>1</sup> To assist in implementing its constitutional authority to promulgate rules and procedures for court proceedings, the Supreme Court established the Standing Committee to Review the Hawai‘i Rules of Appellate Procedure to consider amendments to the appellate rules and submit recommendations to the Supreme Court. The Committee includes representatives from the appellate courts, the private civil and criminal bar, the Honolulu Prosecuting Attorney, the Office of the Public Defender and the Attorney General. When recommendations from the Committee to the Supreme Court are finalized, the Supreme Court releases the proposed amendments for public comment before acting upon them.

Chair Nakashima and Members of the Committee:

The Department of the Attorney General (Department) provides the following comments.

This bill would amend chapter 602, Hawaii Revised Statutes, by adding to part I a new section designated “[s]ua sponte decisions” that provides:

The supreme court, when acting on a matter on appeal, shall not affirm, modify, reverse, or vacate a matter on grounds other than those raised by the parties to the proceeding, unless the parties are provided the opportunity to brief the court and present oral argument on the matter. See page 6, lines 7-11.

The bill would add to part II the same section referring or pertaining to the Intermediate Court of Appeals. See page 6, lines 14-18.

The State of California has a statute very similar to that proposed by the bill.

California Government Code section 68081 provides:

Before the Supreme Court, a court of appeal, or the appellate division of a superior court renders a decision in a proceeding other than a summary denial of a petition for an extraordinary writ, based upon an issue which was not proposed or briefed by any party to the proceeding, the court shall afford the parties an opportunity to present their views on the matter through supplemental briefing. If the court fails to afford that opportunity, a rehearing shall be ordered upon timely petition of any party.

The California statute has been in effect since 1986, and its appellate courts have applied the statute without problem. See, e.g., Adoption of Alexander S., 750 P.2d 778, 783 (Cal. 1988).

To be consistent with the proposed statutory language, the Department suggests deleting the sentence in section 1, on page 5, lines 15 to 16, of the bill that states: “An appellate court must require supplemental briefing and hold oral argument.” The opportunity to brief such issues sufficiently protects litigants’ rights. See Blumberg Assocs. Worldwide, Inc. v. Brown & Brown of Connecticut, 84 A.3d 840, 867-68 (Conn. 2014) (no reason why “reviewing court should be precluded from raising issues involving plain error or constitutional error sua sponte, as long as court provides an opportunity for the parties to be heard by way of supplemental briefing . . .”). Further, the time required to schedule, prepare for, and hold oral arguments would likely result in additional delay in the appellate courts where substantial backlogs already exist.

Also based on the California statute, the Department suggests adding the following sentence to the new sections on page 6, line 11 and line 18, respectively: “If the court fails to afford that opportunity for the parties to submit supplemental briefing, a rehearing shall be ordered upon timely petition of any party.” This will make clear the remedy available in the event that the appellate court fails to provide the parties with the opportunity to submit supplemental briefs.

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on this bill.
