JANUARY 31, 2014, WAIPA MULTIPURPOSE BUILDING

5:30pm-8:00pm

Ha'ena, Kaua'i is one of first communities in Hawai'i to create local level rules based on traditional practices to manage the in shore fishery.

Please join Mehana Vaughan for a presentation on the rules creation process and the community's efforts to answer the following questions.

Who is the Ha'ena community?

Where do fish from the area go?

How are traditional practices translated into contemporary law?

What lessons can be learned for other resource management partnerships between local communities and state government?
